House Kills Wood Bill; Taft Offers Revised T-H

Senate Move Jolts Administration Leaders, Jubilant At 'Saving Face'

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Administration leaders congratulated themselves on "saving face" yesterday, when the House reversed itself and voted 219-209 to shelve the Wood bill, a new-look version of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Hardly had the Administration won its dubious victory in the House when it was faced with a new threat to its control in the Senate.

On the other side of the Capitol, Sen. Robert A. Taft (R., O.) introduced his own 1949 model of the management-labor relations act that bears his name.

22 Features Preserved

His bill, Taft said, would preserve 22 important features of the Taft-Hartley Act and make 28 changes.

Pledged to repeal the Taft-Hartley Act and restore the Wagner Act "with improvements", the Administration suffered a smashing defeat on Tuesday in the House, where it was supposed to have its greatest reserve of strength. Most observers believe the Administration has even less support in the Senate.

Yesterday by a three-vote margin the Administration just barely succeeded in recommitting the Wood bill to the House Labor Committee for further study. This action nullified Tuesday's roll call vote of 217 to 203, by which the House tentatively approved the Wood bill as a substitute for the Taft-Hartley Act.

The reversal occurred overnight, when 10 Southern Democrats broke away from the GOP coalition sponsoring the Wood bill, and returned to the Administration fold.

Lead Runaways Back

Representative Gore, of Tennessee, and Representative Wilbur Mills, of Arkansas, were credited with leading the 10 runaway Democrats back onto the Administration reservation. Gore said Administration leaders promised to come up with a labor relations bill the "whole party" could support.

Chairman John Lesinski (D., Mich.), chairman of the House Labor Committee, said he hoped his committee could come up with such a bill in about four weeks. This measure would be written around the so-called Sims substitute, which the Administration had offered as an eleventh-hour compromise to thwart passage of

Stocks Advance, Trading Picks Up On Foreign News

New York, May 4 (AP).—A turn for the better in the foreign news gave the stock market its biggest lift in the last month today. Final prices advanced a few cents to around $3 a share. Trading expanded rapidly as quotations rose.

Demand was stimulated, according to Wall Street quarters, by a British report that May 12 had been set for lifting the Berlin blockades, plus an approaching meeting of the Big Four to discuss the German problem.

Favorably regarded also was the strong opposition in the House to outright repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Numerous stocks reached new highs for the year, including Richfield Oil, Warner Bros., Loew's, Air Reduction, Carrier Corp., and Brooklyn Union Gas.

2 Protest Innocence

Prichard, Ex-New Deal Aide, Indicted in Ballot Forgery

Lexington, Ky., May 4 (AP).—Edward Fretwell Prichard, jr., former "boy wonder" aide to several top-ranking Washington officials, and A. E. Funk, jr., son of the Kentucky attorney general, were charged today with conspiracy to forge ballots in last fall's general election in Bourbon County, Ky.

They were named in a sealed indictment returned by a Federal grand jury April 15. The true bill contained only one count.

Prichard and Funk pleaded innocent and waived formal arraignment on the charge. They asked Federal District Judge H. Church Ford for an early trial.

They were released under bonds of $5000 each.

The district attorney said the maximum penalty upon conviction is a $5000 fine and 10 years' imprisonment.

Prichard and Funk issued the following statement:

"We are completely innocent of the charge made against us or of any participation in the election frauds committed in Bourbon County last November.

"Because of our innocence, we are requesting a speedy trial. The trial will reveal how destitute of fact or evidence is the charge against us.

"We ask our friends to have faith in us and the public to await the outcome of the trial at which we await vindication with complete confidence."

School Bill Due to Pass Senate Today

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

With major attempts to amend its provisions defeated, the 300-million-dollar-a-year Federal-aid-to-education bill appears headed for certain Senate passage today.

The Senate, 17 to 57, voted down a proposal yesterday by Senator Millard F. Tydings (D., Md.) to strip funds from nearly half the States whose educational spending was already above average.

Also defeated, 30 to 49, was a proposal by Senator Raymond Baldwin (R., Conn.) to have the Federal Government collect funds by taxes but turn over the funds collected within the State for expenditure there.

An amendment introduced by Senators Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.), Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., (R., Mass.), and Robert C. Hendrickson (R., N. J.) received, on a division, only the votes of its sponsors.

The amendment would have required that no teacher in a public elementary or secondary school be paid less than $2850 a year.

Senator Forrest C. Donnell (R., Mo.) is scheduled to deliver a two or three hour address today in behalf of an amendment which would in effect prohibit any of the funds under the bill from being used for other than public schools.

As the bill is now drafted, the individual States can determine for themselves whether or not funds will be used to provide bus transportation and the like for other than nonpublic school pupils.

Senator Brian McMahon (D., Conn.) has introduced a nearly diametrically opposite amendment.

His amendment reads:

"Provided, however, that funds expended to provide school bus transportation shall be available to all school children on a just and equitable basis, without regard to race, creed or color or nationality, or the location or character of the school which the child attends."

Both amendments bring up the frequently argued question of how much public tax money should be used, if any, toward services for parochial schools.

Similar amendments, introduced last year by the same sponsors, were overwhelmingly defeated.

Beachcoat Turns To Tent as Beach Turns to Stare

Paris, May 4 (U.P.).—Elsa Schiaparelli came up today with a beachcoat, which can be pegged out like a tent for undressing on the beach, and a $100 bathing suit.

A young lady, standing erect on a beach and supporting the top of the beachcoat with her neck, could, with some fairly remarkable maneuvers, dress and undress herself.

The beachcoat wearer requires some one to drive pegs into the sand and to unstake her afterwards.

4 Gloucester School Heads Fined $1000

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Richmond, Va., May 4.—Federal Judge Sterling Hutcheson today fined four Gloucester County school officials $1000 for failure to obey his order to equalize Negro and white school facilities in the county.

He pronounced sentence at 4 p. m. EST after an all-day hearing in Federal District Court here.

The court decreed that its "injunction order will continue in effect and that further violations will be dealt with as the court deems proper."

To Be Paid In 30 Days

Judge Hutcheson imposed a $250 fine each on Division Superintendent J. Walter Kenney, and the three members of the Gloucester school board, Stanley T. Gray, Wallace Fletcher and Otis Hogge. The fines are to be paid in 30 days, the judge ordered.

His action was believed to be without precedent in Federal judicial annals.

The superintendent and board members were found in contempt of court last January, after Judge Hutcheson ordered them to equalize physical facilities of Negro and white schools.

At that time he declared he would take into consideration efforts subsequently made by the defendants to comply with his order before they appeared for sentencing today.

Claim Action Accomplished

Charles E. Ford of Newport News, one of three attorneys representing the school officials, contended in his closing argument that the defendants, through "concerted activities," had brought about "the result that your honor thought desirable and necessary under the law."

He emphasized the testimony of G. Tyler Miller, State superintendent of public instruction, that a $50,000 loan to the Gloucester school board has been given top priority over requests to the State Literary Fund totaling more than seven million dollars.

Miller, one of about two dozen witnesses in court for the defense, said a request for an additional $50,000 had reached him from Gloucester yesterday. He said "it is reasonable to assume" that the State Board of Education will approve the second request at its next meeting May 23.

About Two Million Annually

Miller explained that the money can be made available to the now-depleted fund through anticipated income of about two million dollars annually.

He said more than one third of this total will come from repayment of previous loans made against the fund. The remainder will come from "fines, escheats and forfeitures" to which the fund is entitled.

Martin A. Martin, who presented the closing argument for petitioners, asked that the court impose "a substantial fine" on the defendants and that "the greater proportion" be suspended.

He said his purpose was twofold: "To assure the court that the defendants will carry out the objects of this suit, and to vindicate the processes of this court, which have been so flagrantly violated."

One defense witness, Judge J. Douglas Mitchell of the 13th Judicial Circuit, said he personally

$100,000 Trust Fund Is Set Up For Winchester Grade Pupils

Winchester, Va., May 4 (Special).—Pupils of the John Kerr Elementary School here today were named beneficiaries in a $100,000 trust fund left by an 80-year-old produce stand owner.

The late Charles B. Henry, a lifelong Winchester resident and once a pupil at the school, bequeathed his life savings in Government bonds and cash to pupils in the school who now number about 400. The school has only three grades, the first, second and third.

Henry, who died April 23 of a heart condition, made the will two days before his death. He named the Shenandoah Valley National Bank as executor and trustee. The will was filed for probate today in Winchester Corporation Court.

The will stipulated that the payments be made to each youngster "to be used by such child in the furtherance of his or her obtainment of an education."

Each year the children in the school will receive payments from the trust at Christmas and Easter time. They number about 400 now.

If the trust fund earns $4000 yearly, as is estimated, each child will receive a $4 to $5 semiannual payment under the will, with administration expenses deducted.

Mrs. Fred Sturm, frequent buyer at Henry's curb-side market on Loudoun st., said he told her several years ago that he planned to leave his money so every child in the elementary school would receive a $5 present on his or her birthday.

"He told me he didn't care if they spent it all for bubblegum," she recalled today. "He said, they'll all remember old man Henry."

Henry was "crazy" about kids, Winchester residents said.

His only daughter died about 1919, shortly after her marriage leaving him "heartbroken," friends said. His wife, Mrs. Fanny Belle Henry, died in 1932.

Nearest blood relatives are three cousins, Mrs. Lou King, past 70, of Front Royal, Va.; Mrs. Luch Goss, over 90, and Mrs. Hattie Taylor, past 70, both of Winchester.

Henry, who often gave nickels to the John Kerr school children when he passed by, had told friends several years ago that he intended to leave his money to the school children.

The will was witnessed by Robert D. Glaize, Harold G. Brown, and Howard Holland, officers of the Shenandoah bank. Holland, the bank's trust officer, helped draw up the will.

Another stipulation provided that tenants of one of the two houses he owned go on living there as long as they wish for $4 a week rent.

Big 4 Parley On Germany Believed Set For May 23

Officials Here Feel Basic Agreement Of Russia and West Is Still Long Way Off

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Russia, the United States, Britain and France have agreed to end their blockades of Berlin and hold a four-power conference on Germany.

The Russian blockade and the Western Allies' counterblockade are to be lifted May 12, and the Big Four foreign ministers will meet on May 23, according to diplomatic sources.

Agreement on the two moves which may ease the cold war were announced yesterday, after a New York meeting of representatives of all four nations.

The effective dates, and some further details of the agreement, will be announced at 8 a. m. today in the four national capitals and in New York.

Paris Expected To Be Site

Paris is expected to be the site for the foreign ministers' conference, the first such meeting in 17 months.

While the agreement to end the blockades and attempt to work out the deep conflict on administration of Germany has been generally expected since last week's official disclosures that such negotiations were under way, it was believed that some impasse might develop at any time.

Yesterday's accords in no way broke the cautious view of officials here, who feel that any basic agreement on Germany is a long way off.

British and French representatives for the first time yesterday entered the discussions which American Ambassador-at-Large Philip C. Jessup has been conducting since February 15 with Russian Deputy Prime Minister Jakob A. Malik.

U. N. Officials Pleased

United Nations officials expressed particular delight that all the conversations have been between U. N. delegates, adding stature to the U. N.

After a 1½-hour meeting between Jessup, Malik, Sir Alexander Cadogan, British representative to the U. N., and Jean Chauvel, French delegate, a joint statement announced:

"The four representatives have discussed all the problems arising in connection with the situation which you know has been under discussion. We have reached agreement on all the main questions of principle. There are certain details which are still under consideration.

"It can be said specifically that agreement has been reached and that all restrictions imposed in

Heart Attack Kills Indicted News Dealer

Garner S. Barbour Arrested March 25 In Gambling Raid

Garner S. Barbour, 51, 10th st., news dealer who was indicted for gambling April 8, died of a heart attack last evening in his home at 1325 Allison st. ne.

Mr. Barbour, also known as George Barber, was the proprietor of Barber's Newstand, 424 10th st. nw., and a native of Washington.

He was stricken while sitting in a chair in the recreation room of his home. Fire Rescue Squad No. 2 responded to a call and administered oxygen. He was pronounced dead at 6:25 p. m. by Dr. H. Counitho of Gallinger Hospital.

Mr. Barbour was arrested in the rear room of his newstand on March 25, when the building was raided by United States marshals.

He had been in the newsstand business for 20 years, 16 of them at the 10th st. location.

Mr. Barbour is survived by his wife, Edna; two sons, Police Private Harry Q. Barbour, of the 14th Precinct, 166 Forrester st. sw., and John Barbour, 5034 Sargent rd. ne.; a daughter Patricia, of the Allison st. address, and two grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed. Services will be held Saturday from Ryan's funeral home, 317 Pennsylvania ave. se. Burial will be at Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Ford, UAW to Try Again at 10 A. M. To Avert Strike

Detroit, May 4 (U.P.).—An "eleventh hour" negotiating session between the Ford Motor Co. and the CIO United Auto Workers broke up tonight without reaching an agreement that would halt a strike of 65,000 workers at Ford's big River Rouge plant, scheduled for noon Thursday.

A last-minute attempt to avert the strike will be made at 9 a. m. Thursday.

"We are meeting again tomorrow at the union's request," a Ford spokesman said.

Young to Get Nomination For 4th Term

'Can't Beat Somebody With Nobody' Called Appointment Formula

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman has made up his mind to nominate J. Russell Young for a fourth term as District Commissioner.

An announcement will be made shortly. Young's current three-year term expires May 17.

Young's retention in the District Building was assured when his critics, including organized Democrats, failed to suggest an acceptable candidate to replace him. Mr. Truman, it is learned, was not impressed by the names of any of those who were boomed by the opposition.

It appears to have been the old story that you can't beat somebody with nobody.

Ingrid to Rejoin Her Husband to 'Protect Family'

Rome, May 4 (AP).—Ingrid Bergman said today she will rejoin her physician husband, Dr. Peter A. Lindstrom, after completing the film "God's Earth."

The Swedish star, putting at uneasy rest reports of a romance between her and Roberto Rossellini, Italian director-partner in that film, cabled her statement from Messina, Sicily, "for the protection of my family."

The family is made up of herself, Lindstrom and their daughter, Pia, 10.

Miss Bergman did not explicitly deny Rome newspaper declarations that she had planned to divorce Lindstrom and marry Rossellini, but said she and her husband "discussed and clarified our situation." She said she planned to join Lindstrom later in their native Sweden or the United States.

A conference of Lindstrom, Ingrid and Rossellini at the Reale Hotel in Messina took place last night.

Chamber Hits Most Truman Legislation

U. S. Business Group Opposes Any Form of Controlled Economy

The United States Chamber of Commerce last night went on record as opposed to most of President Truman's legislative program.

It denounced "any form of Government-controlled economy," including the Administration's new farm program.

And it urged retention by Congress of most of the controversial features of the Truman-denounced Taft-Hartley labor act.

Some 1700 businessmen adopted more than 50 policy statements at the chamber's annual policy meeting.

There is no place in the competitive American economy, one declared, "for government controls of prices and wages, or of the production and distribution of materials."

The chamber declared Mr. Truman's national health insurance plan would reduce American medical care to a "uniform level of mediocrity."

It asked Congress to weigh carefully whether a minimum-wage law is necessary; and if the answer is yes to fix the minimum at a level which will not be inflationary or destroy job opportunities.

It declared that "rigorous economy," rather than the tax increase requested by the Administration, is the proper path toward a bal-

Disaster Seen If U. S. Fails To Ratify Pact

Would Increase War Danger, Dulles Says, Citing German Position

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Failure of the United States to ratify the North Atlantic Pact would be a "disaster of tremendous proportions," and would "increase greatly the risk of war," John Foster Dulles, Republican foreign affairs expert, said yesterday.

On the other hand, ratification would bring many benefits, Dulles told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. These included:

1. "Substantial economies" in appropriations for European recovery and for the national military establishment.

2. Make it possible to solve the problem of Germany.

The Germans, Dulles asserted, are at present "in a strong bargaining position. If they throw in their lot with Soviet Russia, there is no part of continental Europe that we could hope to save from invasion."

Dulles declared that "there are more Germans in Germany now than before the war." These, he said, are "possessed of great qualities of industriousness, discipline and ambition, painfully compressed in a strategic area between the East and the West.

The Soviet government is making determined efforts to enlist those Germans in its service.

"If the Soviet now lifts the Berlin blockade,' he said, "that may be an act of conciliation toward the West. But until that is shown by other deeds it would be wise for us to look on it as a change of Soviet method, not a change of Soviet intention.

"Germans will be strongly tempted to develop a bargaining position between East and West," Dulles asserted. "They may even come into a temporary alliance

Stinging Bees, Hunting Queen, 'Probe' Citizens

She had a kingdom of people cowering in their houses, afraid to go out.

Her followers—thousands of the stinging insects — turned into bombing bees and raked the town of about 2500.

They darkened windows with their buzzing clusters. They swooped in fierce formations into automobile windows. They stung again and again.

First reports from the bee battle were fragmentary. Several sting casualties were reported in the first hours after thousands of bees broke out of at least one hive in a 100-hive village in an orchard.

Hospitals Cooperate with Local Practitioners

Baltimore City Health Plan

By Agnes E. Meyer
(Fifth of a Series)

THE NEW Johns Hopkins clinic, like its counterpart under the University of Maryland hospital, is a life saver for mothers who have a variety of medical problems and cannot reach a doctor.

Typical was the situation of a mother with three children who came in while I was present. The mother, it appeared, has diabetes; of the three children, one had a toothache, one was pregnant, and all three were to have physical examinations.

In short order, the mother was assigned to a physician, where she will get free insulin injections; the child with the toothache was referred to a dental clinic; the pregnant daughter to a prenatal clinic of the Department of Health, where reservations will be made at some hospital for her delivery.

All this mother's troubles were lifted from her shoulders as if by magic. The ironical element in the situation was the fact that this family is illegitimate, with one 18-year-old daughter starting off her own illegitimate brood. The more illegitimate children they have, the more aid to dependent children is given these mothers. Now they receive as well, free hospitalization, a personal physician to keep them well and listen to their troubles, free medicines, with special diets and vitamins for the undernourished offspring.

Under such favorable conditions, why should any smart young girl in her senses take the risk of marrying a man who, even with steady employment, can never do more than keep his family just above the relief level? The welfare state, as a husband, is a much better bet for these poor girls now that it furnishes not only economic and emotional security but complete health protection.

A Moral Imperative

THUS, it is not only a matter of justice but a moral imperative that the health services of these new clinics which supply not only first-rate medical care but literally underpin the whole social structure at the lower economic levels, must be extended as soon as possible to the medically indigent, those people who can just manage to keep a roof above their heads and the wolf from the door.

This means that the medical profession must figure out how far down voluntary insurance can reach and give to the group between this level and the relief clients, the same completely free coverage. It remains for statistical medical experts like Dr. Reed to decide where the insurance dollar and the tax dollar should meet. For whether we have voluntary or compulsory health insurance, the health bill for the indigent and the medically indigent will have to be met by the taxpayer.

In analyzing the physical examination reports, the clinic is turning up exact information as to unmet medical needs. A study of 1500 families revealed that 40 per cent of the people over 50 suffer from some chronic disease. As medical care prolongs the age of our population more and more, the lack in Maryland, as elsewhere, of institutions for the chronically ill is a pressing problem of huge proportions.

Agents Tell How Miss Coplon Stopped Them in N. Y. Park

A pretty FBI girl, Sappho Manos, told yesterday how she helped stalk Judith Coplon in New York and ran into an unlooked-for adventure.

She told also how she acted as a volunteer matron when Miss Coplon was stripped "naked" following her arrest on the night of March 4.

Miss Manos, 27, of Greek descent, testified in Miss Coplon's espionage trial in District Court that she was chief clerk in the Federal Bureau of Investigation headquarters in New York. So as to create an atmosphere of "nonchalance," it was brought out, she was assigned to accompany an FBI agent in a large-scale surveillance that involved Miss Coplon and Valentin A. Gubitchev, 32-year-old Russian.

Miss Manos and her agent-escort, Thomas J. McAndrews, were shadowing Miss Coplon on the night of February 18 when the trail took them into Fort Tryon Park along the Hudson.

Appellant Classed As Disabled

Appeals Court Rules Veteran Can Be Fired for Bad Debts

A disabled veteran may be fired from his government job for nonpayment of debts without violating the Veterans' Preference Act of 1944, the Court of Appeals ruled yesterday.

The ruling upheld a District Court decision which refused to reinstate Herman J. D. Carter to his job as a War Department clerk-typist. Judge Harry Watkins of West Virginia, sitting by designation, wrote the opinion in which Justices E. Barrett Prettyman and Wilbur K. Miller concurred.

Carter, of 4405 Falls Terrace, se., was discharged in 1946. He is a World War II veteran.

The decision yesterday held that his dismissal was valid and did not violate the Veterans Preference Act of 1944.

Carter was fired, the War Department said, because he had violated a regulation known as "Order T" by not paying his debts after repeated warnings.

Carter said he owed money on a typewriter and on a judgment.

The Civil Service Commission held that the firing violated the Veterance Preference Act and ordered Carter reinstated but the Commission's board of appeals and Review reversed that decision. Carter's subsequent appeal to the District Court was decided similarly.

Judge Watkins said that the Veterans Preference Act authorizes discharge of veterans "for such cause as will promote the efficiency of the service," and that the employing agency has the right to determine what "such cause" is.

Hankow Reported About to Be Yielded

By The Associated Press

Chinese Government forces were reported preparing yesterday to abandon Hankow before the growing peril of a Communist envelopment to the southeast which threatens to isolate that central China fortress.

A Chinese Communist broadcast from Peiping announced the capture of Loping, only 80 miles northeast of Nanchang. The Communists said Government soldiers were in flight before them and that most of the Nationalist 68th army—possibly 20,000 men—was "wiped out."

Reliable reports to Canton, in south China, said Gen. Pai Chung-Hsi, commander in central China, would move his headquarters from Hankow to Changsha within 48 hours. Changsha, capital of Hunan Province, is 200 miles south of Hankow.

Travelers from Changsha said the hard-pressed Pai had sent three divisions of his 200,000-man forces south to prevent Gen. Cheng Chien, governor of Hunan province, from making peace with the Reds.

Hankow faced imminent isolation without the advance of Red columns.

Far to the northeast of this front, Shanghai was cut off from the rest of China except by sea.

Shanghai reported another irritable day of waiting for an indication as to when the Communists would move on the city.

Associated Press Correspondent Tom Lambert in Shanghai reported the money crisis had eased somewhat. He said some employers had managed to surmount the severe money shortage which had threatened disorders to the metropolis.

Twelve hundred Shanghai residents boarded the American President liner General Gordon and sailed from Shanghai for Hong Kong. Only 50 Americans were aboard. That left 1,600 Americans in Shanghai.

The Communist radio reported further victories on the front west of Shanghai, but the Reds apparently were still no closer to Shanghai than 26 miles.

Churchill to Attack British China Policy

London, May 4 (U.P.).—Winston Churchill and his Conservative Party were primed today for a sharp attack on the Labor government's Far East policy during a Commons debate on the China situation Thursday.

In a preliminary skirmish today, the government refused to disclose the strength of Britain's Far East fleet.

Nationalists Forming Emergency Committee

Canton, China, May 4 (U.P.).—The Nationalist government sought today to set up an "emergency action committee" under Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek to resist the Red advance.

Foreign diplomats in Canton said the rifts in the givernment were so serious that it could last only a few months longer.

Blockades to End Next Thursday

Germany which have been the subject of conversations will be mutually lifted.

"After an interval a meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers will be held. The Council of Foreign Ministers will consider questions relating to Germany and problems arising out of the situation in Berlin, including the question of currency."

The statement went on to say all four representatives were "hopeful that the remaining matters of detail" could be resolved to permit a further announcement today. Later it was reported that these details were agreed upon and the statement would be available at 8 a. m.

Reports of the May 12 date for ending the blockades and May 23 for the Big Four conference, came first from London, and were later "confirmed" in New York and Paris.

French Ambassador Henri Bonnet, who called on Secretary of State Acheson yesterday after a three-week trip to France, said Paris will be "delighted" to play host to the Foreign Ministers' meeting.

Bonnet said the agreement to confer on Germany is a "very hopeful sign," and said he is "optimistic" about its outcome.

In Paris, Jefferson Caffery, who is retiring as Ambasador to France, was openly skeptical, saying that Russian propaganda has been intensified since 1946 to "create war hysteria."

"The flower of peace," he said, "cannot be expected to bloom in the poisoned atmosphere of lies and distortions." He added that as yet he sees no signs of any broad area of agreement.

The pointed mention of currency in yesterday's announcement emphasizes that that controversial subject will be near the top of the Foreign Ministers' agenda.

When the Western Allies introduced their own currency reform in western Germany last June 18, the Russians stopped traffic between the Berlin zones, then introduced their own currency in the Soviet zone. On June 23 Russia blocked all road and rail lines into the western zones of Berlin. The allies then launched the highly successful airlift, now in its tenth month, and a counterblockade.

The present agreement is clear recognition of the success of those counter atcions, and Western Allies' intentions to proceed with establishment of a separate government for western Germany despite Russian opposition.

Russia has refused in the past to lift her blockade unless the West abandons its plans in western Germany, and the United States, Great Britain and Rrance have insisted that the blockade must first be lifted before there can be any Big Four meeting.

Compromise offers by Russia are suspected by many Big Three diplomats as an attempt to weaken German interest in a western German government. Russia seek a highly centralized Germany, and withdrawal of occupation troops, which Western diplomats believe would mean a Germany that Russia could control.

The Big Three are agreed upon a loose federation of German states, restoration of a self-sufficient economy, and retention of occupation troops until a peace treaty can be drafted.

On May 5, delegates from western Germany are scheduled to approve a constitution for a federal republic, planned to be in operation by July 15.

Russia reportedly sought to put off the upcoming Big Four meeting to a later than May 23, which could have served to delay or undermine efforts to establish the western German government, but the Western Allies insisted on an early date.

Berlin Exults Over News On Blockade

Berlin, May 4 (NYHT).—"This is a very great event for Berlin—a turning point in history," Ernest Reuter, Lord mayor of Berlin, said exultantly today when news came to him that the blockade will soon be lifted.

He shared his exultation with the rank and file of Berliners. On the dark streets of Berlin the first response was almost unanimously "more light," food, gasoline and the amenities of life. There was little gloating over the political victory.

Red Shift In Austria

Vienna, Austria, May 4 (U.P.).—General Vladimir Kourassov, Soviet High Commissioner in Austria for two years, has been replaced by Lieutenant General W. P. Sviridov, the official Russian agency Tass said tonight. It was understood that Kourassov had been recalled to Moscow for reassignment.

Israel Marks First Birthday As Independent Republic

Tel Aviv, Israel, May 4 (AP).—The state of Israel celebrated its first birthday today.

Religious ceremonies, singing and dancing went as scheduled, but a cheering crowd of more than 200,000 jammed the streets of Tel Aviv so tightly that a military parade had to be canceled.

All over the country solemn processions of the Holy Ark and scrolls of the Law of Sinai were held in synagogues. The first "Yom Azmaut" (Hebrew for independence day) was ushered in by soundings of the shofar (ram's horn).

They turned out all night long singing, dancing, shooting off fireworks and marching in torchlight processions to celebrate their dearly-bought freedom.

It was just a year ago that the country proclaimed its complete independence and the age-old dream of a homeland for the world's Jews came true.

The Ambasador of Israel, Eliahu Elath, and Mrs. Elath held a reception last night to mark the first anniversary of their country's independence.

Approximately 800 guests, including officials and members of the diplomatic corps, attended the affair from 9 p. m. to midnight in the Terrace Banquet Room of the Shoreham Hotel.

Musical entertainment included songs by Miss Shoshana Damari, of Israel, and Joseph Goland. Flags of Israel and the United States decorated the room.

A delegation of more than 50 children from the Hebrew Academy of Washington yesterday visited the Israeli Embassy, 2210 Massachusetts ave. nw., to congratulate the State of Israel on its first birthday.

Jerry Kaminetzky, 326 Emerson st. nw., and Judith Segal, 1522 Varnum st. nw., spoke for the group. Yaacob Guttman, embassy attache, accepted the greeting on behalf of the Ambassador.

Dulles Cites Pact Benefits

with the Soviet. Russia has much to offer at the expense of Poland. The Soviets and Germans, in partnership, could readily dominate the continent."

Dulles held that "the statesmanlike course is to provide the Germans with a decent and hopeful future within the orbit of the West." But without the United States a partner of the other North Atlantic nations, he said, "the Germans would be too strong for the comfort and safety of our European allies.

"Germany can be brought into the West if that West includes the United States,' he emphasized. 'They cannot safely be brought into the West if the West does not include the United States."

Stresses Other Points

Dulles drove home several other points he said must be considered in any study of the Atlantic Treaty:

1. The pact is needed to eliminate doubt that the Atlantic community will act quickly and unitedly for common defense.

2. The pact should not be operated primarily as a military instrument.

3. The Atlantic and Rio Pacts should not be understood as tacit offers to divide the world with Soviet communism.

4. The pact should not inaugurate a system of group consultations which would destroy the value of the United Nations as the "town meeting of the world."

5. The pact should not lead the American people to feel that their primary reliance is on material things.

To repudiate the pact now, he said, would reflect a change in the American point of view, discourage western European countries and cause them to lose faith in the United States.

Dulles said he thought the pact could make possible an "almost immediate" reduction in our national defense expenditures. Such a reduction would "prove to the world," he said "that the pact doesn't mean that we are engaging in an armaments race.

William L. Clayton, former Undersecretary of State, also approved the pact, but, as vice president of the Atlantic Union Committee, declared it "a natural and necessary step toward a Federal Union."

"When the pact is ratified, as it must be, the danger of a shooting war in the foreseeable future will have been greatly lessened," he said, "but, make no mistake about it, the cold war will go on with perhaps greater vigor than heretofore."

Clayton said it was Rusia's "principal objectives" to frighten democratic governments "into excessive expenditures for defense, and to frighten private capital and initiative so that it will not operate freely.

"If both objectives can be achieved, economic disintegration will likely ensue. Economic disintegration is usually followed by political disintegration. Soviet Russia is a master at this type of warfare."

Clayton declared that "we have won the Battle of Berlin because that was a problem in transportation, a field in which we excel.

"But we have not won the Battle of Greece, although we have sunk a billion dollars there. The Battle of the Middle East must still be fought.

"We have practically lost the Battle of China, and with it probably the entire Pacific area, so vital to our interests and security.

"And we have not yet won the Battle of Western Europe.

"The problem, "Clayton declared, "of world peace is the problem of getting Russia back on her own ground without a shooting war and without a long cold war, the cost of which might bring the democracies to the verge of bankruptcy.

"Federal Union should make such a peace possible.

"The total military, industrial, economic and manpower strength of the democracies of the world so greatly exceeds that of Soviet Russia that it would not dare attack.

"Federal Union would bring the armed forces of all its members under one command, with bases wherever needed. Enormous savings would result."

A third witness, James C. Carey, secretary-treasurer of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, declared the Atlantic Pact "sound foreign policy." Carey read an indorsement of the pact by the CIO.

War Won't Resolve Conflict, Clay Says

Rafenwoehr, Germany, May 4 (AP).—Gen. Lucius D. Clay said today he is leaving Germany convinced an East-West war is not inevitable, but that the basic struggle between Russian communism and Western democracy will continue.

"War will not solve the problem," he told newsmen.

Communism can be defeated peacefully, declared the man who for four years has commanded American forces in Germany, "if we keep faith in our American ideals and help the rest of the world."

The Army, Navy and Air Force joined in a massive farewell tribute to Clay, who retires as military governor of Germany May 15 and from the Army June 1.

Proud of Occupation Force

The rebuilding of American occupation troops into a hard-hitting combat force is Clay's proudest achievement. Under his command, crime rates have dropped and United States orces have developed into a well-disciplined team which is probably the best for its size ever seen in Europe.

When these forces passed in review before the slight graying man, he put a hand to his face.

Fighter planes overhead spelled out "CLAY."

"My heart is filled with pride and joy," he said.

He told the troops that knowing Lt. Gen. Clarence R. Huebner, his chief of staff, would succeed him made retirement less dificult.

"Nothing I can say can add to his reputation as an American soldier," said General Clay.

'Never Felt Better,' He Says

The general denied that health had anything to do with his retirement.

"I never felt better," Clay insisted.

He said he was retiring mainly because "for the last seven or eight years, I have had rather difficult asignments. I think I would like to get away from problems for a while."

He commanded American forces in Germany at a time when relations with wartime-ally Russia degeenrated into the cold war.

Almost alone among Americans he believed that Berlin, blockaded by the Soviets, could be kept alive by the British-American airlift. Clay wore down considerable opposition in the State and War Departments when, a year ago, he laid down the policy of staying in Berlin with all "measures short of war."

The general has presided over the policy change which saw the United States give up its war aim of a prostrate, deindustrialized Germany to try to develop a prosperous, democratic land here.

Clay has been accused of making policy over the heads of Washington authorities. This he denies.

Expects United Germany

Under Clay the war crimes trials, denazification proceedings, and other punitive measures have been completed. So the general can say:

"Whoever takes over can start with a reconstruction program and not be harassed by the punitive measures which characterized postwar Germany until the present time."

The retiring military governor said that he expected Soviet-ruled eastern Germany to be joined with the west "sooner or later."

He said he only hoped this unification would come under the same type of safeguards and democratic procedures instituted in the west German constitution.

He said German democracy would have more "protocol, formality and rigidity" than Americans are accustomed to, but there were encouraging signs Germans wanted a democracy.

The Allied occupation of Germany, he said, should "taper off" fairly rapidly in terms of controls but security measures should be retained.

Signing Today

Law Drafted For Council Of Europe

London, May 4 (NYHT).—The statute for the Council of Europe—first "parliament of Europe"—was completed today, and will be signed Thursday by representatives of ten Western European nations.

Final details were agreed on today by the foreign ministers of Britain, France, the Netherlands, Italy, Luxembourg, Ireland, Denmark, Norway and Sweden, and the London Ambassador of Belgium.

Text of the statute will be issued Thursday after it has been signed.

The first meeting of the council will take place at Strasbourg at the end of July, or early in August.

It was understood the foreign ministers decided to delay action on bringing Greece and Turkey into the council.

Turkey Plans 'Liberal' List Of Reforms

Istanbul, Turkey, May 4 (U.P.).—Premier Semsettin Gunaltay said today his government is preparing a series of "liberal reforms," including a new election and press law, and partial civilian control over the Turkish military establishment.

The 67-year-old premier said the proposed measures constitute some of the "most liberal legislation in Turkey's history."

He disclosed also that the government plans to submit to the legislature a law for the "control of communism and reaction." No details were given.

The premier said the new election law would end criticism "once and for all." He added: "If we are to establish a stable democratic regime in this country, it is of utmost importance that the whole nation believe in the security of their elections."

The criticism referred to concerned charges of fraud that accompanied Turkey's first multiparty election in 1946.

Gunaltay said the revised press law would guarantee the "complete freedom of the press with the single limitation that the press may not assault the basic rights of other citizens." All jail sentences would be removed under the new law, leaving only monetary fines for violations, he said.

A number of Turkish journalists have been jailed on charges of slander and libel.

The proposed new regulations for the army merges the military organization with the ministry of defense under a supreme defense council, composed of the chief of staff and several cabinet members.

Greek Rebels Seek Peace

Prague, Czechoslovakia, May 4 (AP).—Communist-led Greek rebels have offered to "make peace" because they expect the lifting of the Berlin blockade to end the cold war in Europe, a spokesman of the rebel regime said tonight.

In Athens, a foreign ministry source called the new rebel offer a trap and a continuation of a "broader policy of appeasement which began in Berlin."

Miltiades Porphyrogenis, the rebel "minister of justice," told newsmen:

"When the Berlin question is settled, and we think it will be, the only clash left in Europe will be in Greece . . . We are sincere in saying we want peace . . . because there will be peace in Berlin, too."

Porphyrogenis said the rebels sent their peace overtures via the Czechoslovak government to Dr. Herbert V. Evatt, president of the United Nations General Assembly, because the American-aided Athens government is "nothing but puppets."

Greek Communists would not oppose continued American aid, Porphyrogenis said, if the Greek people voted for it in a free election supervised by the United Nations.

South Korea Suspends Paper Backing Reds

Seoul, Korea, May 4 (U.P.).—The government announced today the newspaper, Shinmun, has been suspended temporarily for supporting the North Korea Communist regime and passing up government press releases.

Public Information Director Kim Dong Song said Shinmun had used fewer goverment handouts during the first three months of 1949 than any other paper in South Korea.

Shinmun is South Korea's largest daily.

Clay's Farewell . . .

Tories Score Slight Gains In Scotland

Glasgow, May 4 (AP).—Returns today from Scottish municipal elections gave Conservatives small gains over Britain's ruling Labor (Socialist) Party.

With figures still incomplete, the British Press Association reported the Socialists suffered a net loss of 46 seats in the balloting for council members in Scotland's burghs yesterday.

A Labor spokesman, however, said his party lost only a net of 29 of the nearly 1000 seats at stake. He blamed Communist and other minor party opposition.

Conservatives, who ran under progressive and moderate labels, claimed "significant gains."

The next big test will be the 28 London borough council elections May 12.

Belgium Votes On Pact

Brussels, Belgium, May 4 (AP).—The Chamber of Deputies ratified the Atlantic Treaty today, 139 to 22 (Communists). The Senate still must act.

13 Girls Killed In Glasgow Store Fire

Glasgow, Scotland, May 4 (AP).—Thirteen girls were killed and 22 other persons injured today in a fire that swept through a large Glasgow department store.

All of the girls were believed to be employes of the department store, Grafton's Ltd.

Scores of girls were trapped on the upper floors while firemen battled an hour and a half to reach them.

Two girls leaped to death from the top floor. Bodies of several others were found huddled in a group on the upper floors. They apparently suffocated.

C-74 With 85 Tops Record For Atlantic

Marham, Eng., May 4 (AP).—A Douglas C-74 Globemaster roared westward tonight with 82 homeward-bound U. S. airmen.

It had just set a new record for a trans-Atlantic plane passenger load, arriving from the United States earlier in the day with 85 aboard.

"It's almost a shuttle service we're running now over the Atlantic," said Lieut. Walter Wall of Columbia, S. C., the pilot.

The Globemasters will carry over airmen for duty at U. S. air bases here and return with others completing their tours.

New C-97 Completes Airlift Trial Flight

Berlin, May 4 (AP).—An American C-97 Stratofreighter completed a maiden airlift flight from western Germany to Berlin today with 10 tone of coal, although its cargo capacity is 26½ tons.

The blunt-nosed craft, transport sister of the B-50 bomber which recently flew around the world nonstop, had an "uneventful hop" today, the pilot, First Lieut. Richard F. Heller of Dubuque, Ill., reported.

Paratyphoid Hits France

La Roche sur Yon, France, May 4 (AP).—An epidemic of paratyphoid is spreading in the Vendee region of southern France. Up to today, 1200 cases have been reported and 12 deaths have been ascribed to the disease.

29 Die as Plane Hits Steeple of Cathedral

Turin, Italy, May 4 (U.P.).—An airliner hit the steeple of ancient Superga Cathedral today, killing at least 29 of the 31 persons believed aboard.

The chartered three-engine Fiat transport was circling the city in heavy raincloud, trying for a landing at Turin airport.

A wingtip caught on the steeple, a landmark for centuries, and plunged the plane to the ground in the rear of the cathedral's sanctuary.

Police had recovered 29 bodies. They were still searching the wreckage. Airport officials said two more persons had been aboard.

The victims were tentatively identified as four officials of the Turin's championship soccer football club, three Italian sportswriters, 18 football players—including every regular member of the championship team except one and the plane's four crewmen.

The soccer players, Italian national champions for four years, were returning from matches at Lisbon, Portugal.

For soccer-loving Italy, the tragedy was comparable to the shock United States sports fans would feel if the world series champions were wiped out in one disaster.

The only regular member of the team left was Ezio Moroso, who could not make the Portuguese trip because of illness.

Fifteen minutes after the crash, every shop in downtown Turin had closed. Heavy police guards barred crowds from the hilltop cathedral.

The Superga Cathedral is perched atop a 2205-foot hill on the eastern outskirts of Turin. The lofty-domed church was built 222 years ago to commemorate the battle of Turin in 1706, when Austrian troops expelled the French from the city.

No Political Franco Loan Bars Seen

The United States has no political objections to letting Spain obtain an American loan, Secretary of State Dean Acheson said yesterday.

Spain's economic position, however, makes her a bad credit risk for obtaining a loan from the Export-Import Bank, he said, unless Spain makes broad financial reforms.

While the State Department had said on Tuesday that Franco Spain is free to attempt to negotiate a loan with the Export-Import Bank, Acheson's comment that there are no political bars to such a loan was the first official statement on that score.

Acheson said, at his news conference, that he saw no particular signifiance to his comment on the political aspect, and other Government officials said it was made clear to Spain some time ago that her failure to obtain a loan was based on economic and not political grounds.

At the Spanish Embassy, however, one official welcomed the statement enthusiastically, despite the accompanying expressions of doubt that Spain can institute the required reforms.

Other officials here have said previously that to achieve any measure of economic stability Spain must cease channeling the bulk of its production to Government uses, and set a realistic exchange rate on the peseta.

Spain is reportedly seeking an American loan for about 200 million dollars, and a representative from Madrid is en route here to discuss this with the Export-Import Bank.

A spokesman at the bank yesterday stressed Spain's present position as a credit risk. But prior to Acheson's statement, he said, "our understanding was that political differences precluded the Spanish government from borrowing money in the United States."

U. N. Invites Israel To State Its Case For Membership

Lake Success, May 4 (AP).—Israel was invited today to come to the U. N. Thursday and state its claim for membership.

At the same time the Assembly's 58-nation special political committee called on the new State's representative to clarify its position on the future of Jerusalem.

Aubrey Eban is chief of the Israeli U. N. mission here.

Agreement was general today that an Israeli representative should be heard. The vote for the invitation was 35 to 6, with 11 abstentions and only the Arab countries voting "no."

Ex-Post Reporter Now Attache

Wilson

Earl J. Wilson, former Washington Post reporter, has been appointed United States consular attache at Shanghai, China, where he served for two years as assistant public affairs officer in the Foreign Service.

A native Washingtonian, Wilson attended Georgetown University School of Foreign Service and George Washington University. He left the Marine Corps after World War II as a captain, with service in Tarawa, Guam, Leyte and other Pacific campaigns.

Returning to the Post's staff after the war, Wilson entered the Foreign Service in 1947. His wife, the former Lorane Andrews, and three children, were recently evacuated to Manila from Shanghai.

PBA Would Oust D. C. Veteran Unit

Public Buildings Administration yesterday indicated the start of a move to dislodge the District Veterans Service Center from the federally-owned structure at Pennsylvania ave. and 14th st. nw.

John L. Nagle, deputy commissioner for real estate management, asked the District Commissioners for a conference to discuss "possible plans" for moving the unit into a "District-owned building."

PBA officials said Federal agencies need space "desperately," and there are no present plans for razing the temporary structure, formerly the United States information center.

The request followed a strongly worded message from the Commissioners to the PBA last week informing the agency it should not count on using the second floor of the District-owned Central Public Library building at 499 Pennsylvania ave. nw.

The commissioners said the library space will be needed to accommodate units moved out of the District Building and the Municipal Center if passage of the tain departments in the District sales tax forces expansion of cer- Building.

Col. Waldron E. Leonard, director of the veterans center, said moving the agency will inconvenience 350 veterans a day now being assisted in housing, education and claims problems.

PUC Backs 6 Bus Line SE Changes

The District Public Utilities Commission yesterday authorized six major changes in Capital Transit Co. bus lines serving Southeast Washington, effective July 3.

1. Extension of the W-4, Portland Street line, to the Savannah Heights and Camp Simms areas, and to provide crosstown service between the Bolling Field and Hillcrest sections.

2. Removal of a special five cent fare now in effect on the Portland Street line because of the extension. Regular rates will prevail.

3. Extension of the C-2 branch of the Sousa Bridge lines from the present terminus at 36th and Bangor sts. se. to the vicinity of the intersection of Alabama and Pennsylvania aves., to provide direct access to Fairfax Village.

4. Lengthening the present shuttle bus operation serving Shipley ter. to Barney clc., providing service to central Washington with only one transfer instead of the two now required.

5. Adding to the C-2, 36th and Bangor sts. branch of the Sousa Bridge lines, so service will run from Barney clc. to the intersection of Alabama and Pennsylvania aves.

6. Extensions of the C-2 branch and the W-4, Portland st. line, to Alabama and Pennsylvania aves., to increase service in the Randle Highlands-Hillcrest areas.

A five-star general, Marshall has retained a small office at the Pentagon with a secretary to handle his Army correspondence.

Highway Safety Group Sets Up 5 Regions for Study

The President's Highway Safety Conference yesterday announced the grouping of States with common problems into five regions for the study of traffic conditions.

Each region has been made up with a State Governor as chairman, a mayor as vice chairman and an experienced highway traffic official as secretary, Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, general chairman of the conference, said.

The five regional groups will hold simultaneous meetings in Washington June 1 through 3, beside the general sessions of the conference.

Through the regional discussions—Fleming said, the conference hopes "to get things done in the highway safety program."

"Interchange of representatives by states with common problems is one means to this end," he said. "Out of closer understanding of mutual problems it is hoped to reduce the highway death toll which reached 32,000 in 1948."

The District of Columbia's group includes Connecticut, Delaware, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Rhode Island and Vermont. Gov. Sherman Adams of New Hampshire is chairman, Mayor Dennis J. Roberts of Providence, R. I., vice-chairman, and George E. Keneipp, director of vehicles and traffic here, secretary.

WHY ANCIENT AGE IS WORLD'S LARGEST-SELLING 5-YEAR-OLD STRAIGHT KENTUCKY BOURBON

FOREWORD: You are entitled to know the real truth about the whiskey situation in the United States as of right now. Here are the facts. You owe it to yourself to read every word of this Statement.

THE STRAIGHT WHISKEY DISTILLING CO. OF AMERICA

When there was plenty of fully matured whiskey in the United States, Ancient Age was the largest-selling 5-year-old Straight Kentucky Bourbon in the world. Today, "Double-A" (as Ancient Age is affectionately known to millions of friends) is once again, America's most widely-purchased 5-year-old Straight Kentucky Bourbon. Behind this impressive swing back to favor lies a story of transcendent importance to everyone who buys or drinks whiskey, and who is interested in knowing what he gets for his money and why.

LET'S TURN BACK THE CALENDAR

Bourbon is the type of whiskey that America has always favored most. Even today, more Bourbon (in one form or another) is consumed than any other kind of whiskey. Originally made in Kentucky, Bourbon was for many years made only in Kentucky. And Kentucky Bourbon . . . Straight Kentucky Bourbon . . . remains the standard of Bourbon excellence, today possibly more than ever.

WHAT'S BEHIND THE 'KENTUCKY' TRADITION?

Is there anything to the universally-held belief that Kentucky Bourbon is superior to other types of straight whiskies? The answer is an emphatic Yes!

It is absolutely true that there is something in the soil of Kentucky that makes its famous limestone water, drawn from deep, cool springs, impart a particular quality to the whiskies in which it is used. Even the peculiar climate of Kentucky seems to contribute its unique share to the production of Bourbon Whiskey that is unsurpassed in flavor, bouquet and gentle friendliness.

"OF HEART AND HAND"

Perhaps it is not possible to establish these things chemically, but the making of whiskey is no more a pure matter of science than is the breeding of superlative blue-bloods, another activity in which Kentucky reigns supreme in the Nation. The making of whiskey is a process of hand and heart . . . and there is no gain-saying the fact that the most famous distillers have been Kentuckians. And so craftsmanship and an inherent feel for painstaking distilling methods, must be considered one of the most important reasons for the superiority of Straight Kentucky Bourbon, and the popularity it has enjoyed throughout American history.

WHAT WAR-TIME RESTRICTIONS DID

During the War, virtually no Straight Kentucky Bourbon Whiskey was "laid down" . . . that is: distilled and put aside to age. Stocks of aged Straight Kentucky Bourbon, while adequate for normal, peace-time needs, proved inadequate to the increased War-time demand. Many brands were withdrawn from the market. Ancient Age, at that time the largest-selling 5-year-old Straight Kentucky Bourbon, was among these.

THE SWING BACK

Now, Ancient Age is back again. Today, this great Straight Kentucky Bourbon has behind it, the largest stock of aged and aging Kentucky whiskies in the world! These huge reserves are America's assurance of Ancient Age's continuing availability and unchanging high quality . . . its even maturity; natural aging; absolute uniformity.

More important than the news of its being back in quantity, is the companion fact that Ancient Age is again in its position of leadership . . . the largest-selling 5-year-old Straight Kentucky Bourbon in the world.

It didn't take America long to find out that Ancient Age was back. It didn't take America long to re-establish Ancient Age as its favorite 5-year-old Straight Kentucky Bourbon, and right now, hundreds and hundreds of thousands are coming back for Ancient Age . . . not once, but again and again!

There must be a reason for this preference that has twice asserted itself. And there is.

IT BOILS DOWN TO THIS

The real truth about Ancient Age's popularity is based on two important facts. First, Ancient Age is all Straight Whiskey . . . every single drop. Second, this Straight Whiskey is Kentucky Bourbon . . . every single drop . . . distilled, matured and bottled in the Commonwealth of Kentucky, by Kentucky craftsmen. From this high standard, Ancient Age has never deviated . . . and never will.

Important, too, is the fact that every single drop of Ancient Age Straight Kentucky Bourbon is thoroughly and uniformly matured for five long years, before it is bottled. This careful, traditional aging process gives "Double-A" a mellow flavor that is distinctive and easily recognized. Most whiskey fanciers who try Ancient Age are never again satisfied with a lesser whiskey.

WHY FIVE YEARS OLD?

Ancient Age doesn't just "happen" to be 5 years old. It is 5 years old because the famous old Kentucky distillers who make this superb Straight Kentucky Bourbon, believe that at exactly five years of age, Straight Kentucky Bourbon Whiskey attains its ultimate peak of flavor, richness, bouquet . . . all the qualities that have made this type of whiskey so famous.

Experience in producing "Double-A" . . . and its acceptance by the American public . . . amply justify this carefully arrived-at belief. America likes this 5-year-old Straight Kentucky Bourbon better than any other kind or brand. Ancient Age is, in all truth, "the Whiskey with Age in its flavor".

MAKE THIS TEST

You have read the facts about Ancient Age, and about Straight Kentucky Bourbon Whiskey. Now put these facts to the acid test of your own taste.

Buy a single bottle of Ancient Age Straight Kentucky Bourbon Whiskey. Try it in a high-ball, in a cocktail and sip it thoughtfully, "neat". Roll it under your tongue. Savor it as it slips so gently down your throat. Notice what a refreshingly different taste lingers in your mouth, setting your delicate taste-glands to "watering".

Ask yourself, in all honesty, if you have ever tasted a Whiskey so smooth, so perfectly matured, so full of fine flavor, so easy-to-take.

AS TO PRICE

Then, compare the price of Ancient Age with the price of any and all other Bourbons. But when you do, be sure you compare like with like.

First, make sure that it is Straight Whiskey. Then, make sure that it is Kentucky Whiskey. Finally, make sure it is Bourbon Whiskey. Not just one, but all three, because Ancient Age is all three. It's Straight Kentucky Bourbon Whiskey . . . every single drop!

Compared fairly, you'll find that Ancient Age is your best buy. Then, we sincerely believe, you, too, will come back for Ancient Age again and again. You, too, will join the millions who have come back to the old standard of honest values . . . for the old flavor-favorite of all 5-year-old Straight Kentucky Bourbons . . . Ancient Age!

Judge Asks Facts On 'Lost' Prisoner

Judge James W. Morris called on the United States Attorney yesterday to explain why Scott W. Fuller, 23, was held four months in District Jail before he was indicted.

The District Court jurist termed the prolonged imprisonment of the $120 larceny suspect an "unconscionable delay."

Testimony in a four-hour hearing on a motion to dismiss the indictment yesterday failed to disclose a hint as to why Fuller was never brought before a local court since his return here from his native North Carolina last December.

"The court has not been told anything about the unconscionable delay after the man came back here. I want to hear about it," said Judge Morris.

Explanation Promised Today

Assistant United States Attorney Richard Roberts promised to give the court a full explanation today. Roberts had declined on technical grounds to reveal the circumstances of the detention, but finally was directed by the judge to do so.

For a moment, during the proceeding it appeared that Fuller was to be free on his personal recognizance for the first time since he was brought here.

The hopeful moment came after Roberts asked a two-weeks delay in actual trial of the case because a death had occurred in the family of a Government witness.

Judge Morris said that in his view the continuance was "unreasonable," if Fuller remained in jail.

Suggests Release on Bond

At that point, Defense Attorney T. Emmett McKenzie suggested that Fuller be released on personal bond, but requested time during the luncheon recess to see if any organization was willing to give Fuller food and lodging pending the trial.

Later, McKenzie said he needed more time to make inquiries and Fuller went back to jail for the night. The hearing continues today.

So far, court evidence has indicated the following:

1. After a theft here last June from a filling station, Fuller was arrested as a suspect in Sedalia, N. C., on December 7. He was arrested after a telegram and letter were received by the United States Marshal in that state requesting his apprehension.

2. The United States Commissioner in Greensboro believed from the messages that Fuller was wanted here for "stealing from Robert S. Bryant." Bryant is Chief of Detectives here and transmitted the messages.

Never Before U. S. Judge

3. Fuller for a time at least had a lawyer in North Carolina and was willing to waive extradition proceedings but never appeared before a Federal judge.

4. He arrived here handcuffed to a marshal, was taken to District Jail and held on a commitment reading "hold for United States Marshal pending further commitment.

5. The paper purporting to be a wavier of removal proceedings from North Carolina has been lost.

6. Fuller was indicted April 18, five days after McKenzie protested to the court the continued incarceration of his client. McKenzie had been hired by Fuller only a few days before.

Quadruplets Born To Bronx Mother, 27

New York, May 4 (AP).—A 27-year-old Bronx mother today gave birth to quadruplets, two boys and two girls.

"My, how wonderful," Mrs. Ethel Collins murmured.

The babies were reported "doing well."

The father, Charles, 29, is a clerk in a brokerage firm.

Quadruplets occur about once in every 551,271 births. An average of about three sets a year are born alive in the United States.

First Degree Murder Trial Faces Babich

Milwaukee, Wis., May 4 (U.P.).—District Judge Harvey Neelen today ordered Milton Babich, 19, bound for trial on a first degree murder charge in the slaying of his bride's sister.

The youth was accused of shooting Patricia Birmingham, 16, to death last February 10 and tossing her weighted body in the Milwaukee River.

Man Declared Mad Indicted In Alexandria

Joseph W. Hunter, 27, who was indicted for two Washington slayings and then declared insane in March, was indicted in Alexandria yesterday on a murder charge in connection with the death last September 11 of Alexandria Police Pvt. Robert B. Harris.

The grand jury returned indictments against 34 other persons.

Hunter, whose address was 1247 Union st. sw., reportedly confessed shooting Harris in the early morning as the police recruit was making a routine check in the rear of a restaurant.

Chances that Alexandria authorities will ever try him for the Harris killing appear slim. If he is ever declared sane, Hunter must first stand trial in Washington for the fata lshooting of two men in a Southwest movie theater last October, to which he also reportedly confessed.

Among others indicted was a Frank Wisbar, whom Commonwealth's Attorney Howard W. Smith said was a movie director in Hollywood. Wisbar was indicted on a charge of non-support of his two minor children who live with their mother in Alexandria. He has not been apprehended, Smith said.

Corporation Court Judge William P. Woolls gave prison sentences to six who had pleaded guilty at their arraignment following the grand jury's report.

Alexandria Democrats Urged to Register

The Alexandria Democratic Committee yesterday urged voters to register by May 14 to vote in the June 14 Alexandria City Council Election. The City Registrar's office will be open the Saturdays of May 7 and May 14 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., in addition to its regular week day hours.

Landover Man Acquitted in $10 Robbery-Killing of Northeast Resident

Leroy L. Smith, 25, of Landover, Md., was acquitted yesterday by a District Court jury of first-degree murder in the death of John Gant, 55, of 6105 Eads st. ne.

The jury deliberated less than three hours before delivering the verdict to Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut. Gant was slugged to death with a brick and robbed of $10 last September in the 6200 block of Dix st. se., according to the indictment.

Smith had admitted, police said, being in the vicinity of the crime, but had denied that he was in any way implicated.

He was indicted along with John B. Greenleaf 37, of Fairmont Heights, Md., and Edward J. Blake, 21, of Fairmont Heights.

Greenleaf pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the case. Later, he told the court he knew nothing about the crime, but the guilty plea still stands.

Blake, who psychiatrists said is an imbecile, was found to lack the mental capacity to commit the criminal act.

Appeals Court Reverses FCC Station Choice

By The Associated Press

The United States Court of Appeals here yesterday questioned the Federal Communications Commission's use of local newspaper ownership as a yardstick for choosing between rival applicants for radio licenses.

The court said in effect that if such ownership is considered, equal consideration must be given to the interests of all parties involved in various news media including radio stations in the same general area.

The opinion was handed down by the court in one of three cases involving radio station permits which it sent back to FCC for further consideration.

The court reversed the commission's grant to Lubbock County Broadcasting Co., for a new 790-kilocycle station at Lubbock, Tex., and its denial of the competing application of Plains Radio Broadcasting Co.

The court noted that the commission said it had decided in favor of Lubbock County Broadcasting Co. because, among other things, "it would be more in the public interest to provide an additional medium for the dissemination of news and information to the public that would be independent of and afford a degree of competition to other such media in the area." Then the court observed:

"So far as we can tell, on this matter of media for the dissemination of news, it (FCC) gave weight only to the fact that this appellant (Plains) owned the newspaper in Lubbock.

"The evidence and the findings indicate that there are facts pertaining to the successful intervenor (Lubbock County Broadcasting) which bear upon the concentration of media for the dissemination of news.

"Intervenor is a partnership of three partners, with 43¾, 43¾ and 12½ per cent interests, respectively. One partner owns half of a radio station at Brownwood, Tex., and 20 per cent of stations at Waco and Austin. The second principal partner owns 90 per cent of the newspaper in Brownwood, Tex., has interests in newspapers in Del Rio and Lamesa, Texas, and owns the other half of the Brownwood radio station and another 25 per cent of the Waco and Austin stations.

"It seems to us that in considering the public interests in the maintenance of competition in the dissemination of news, the commission cannot select the one fact that one applicant is the owner of the town's only newspaper and ignore the fact that the other applicant is directly related to several newspapers and radio stations in the same general section of the country, (although not in this immediate community).

"A concentration of news dissemination by a chain of stations over an area would seem to us to be a factor in a comparative valuation from the standpoint of competition in news dissemination. We think that the commission must weigh pro and con the facts as to each applicant upon the subject which it deems material in a comparative evaluation. It cannot select and assert as material the pertinent characteristics of one applicant and ignore the related features of the others."

Ohio Belt Line For Ore, Coal Seems Blocked

Columbus, Ohio, May 4 (AP).—Hopes for a 130-mile 210-million-dollar belt line to carry coal and iron ore more cheaply between Lake Erie and the Ohio River went glimmering today.

The House Commerce and Transportation Committee voted 12-4 last night to kill the "rubber railroad" bill by indefinite postponement. A committee member said Gov. Frank J. Lausche had asked the committee to recommend passage of the measure.

The vote came after prolonged hearings at which railroads and their brotherhoods voiced bitter opposition. Top-flight lobbyists whipped up opposition throughout the State.

School Committee Asks Recreation Board To Defer Action on Playground Segregation

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

The Board of Education said yesterday it will ask the Recreation Board to hold off deciding what the segregation policy will be on Washington's playgrounds.

School board members who are represented on the Recreation Board by a delegate said they wanted to consider the question of segregation and instruct their delegate how to vote. The Recreation Board is expected to take up the segregation issue at its meeting next Tuesday.

The board agreed to ask for the delay after board member Adelbert W. Lee yesterday prevented consideration by the board of the question of how the board's delegate should be instructed.

The board has a custom of not taking action on any question when a member asks for additional time.

The school board named Albert E. Steinem to serve as its delegate to the Recreation Board. George E. C. Hayes, one of three Negro members, was elected alternate.

Naming of the delegate and alternate were the only actions other than routine business accomplished by the board in more than four hours of discussion and bickering over parliamentary procedure.

Five major questions involving school policy were put over until the next meeting on May 18. Action was postponed on each when it became apparent that there could be no immediate agreement.

Board President C. Melvin Sharpe abolished a special committee on athletics which he appointed two weeks ago after Dr. James A. Gannon charged that the committee was illegal under board rules and would infringe on duties of the superintendent of schools.

After more than half an hour of discussion on legality of the committee the board agreed to consider setting it up again at the next meeting.

Other matters postponed were:

Approval of a bill now before Congress that will give teachers 10 days of sick leave a year. At present teachers have no sick leave. The board has approved in principle the sick-leave plan but decided yesterday it could not vote for the bill because it had not cleared through a board committee.

Wording of legislation that the board hopes to get through Congress at an early date setting up a central cafeteria program.

Abolishment of mid-year promotions and entrances of students.

Four Trains To Bring in The Circus

PAUL JEROME,
a Ringling star with plenty of collar room

The circus—Ringling Brothers, Barnum and Bailey—will arrive in Washington May 16 for a five-day run May 17 to 21 at Benning rd. and Twenty-sixth st. ne.

Four streamlined trains will roll the circus over the Pennsylvania Railroad into Washington. The "No. 1 Advertising Car," carrying advance press agents for the show, is already in town.

The circus this year is featuring about twenty new European acts, "never before seen in America" as the circus people say. They include The Geraldos, Lilian Wittmack, the Margas, Alma Piaia and the Morals, aerial and ring artists; Peterson's jockey dogs and Patterson's Ponies; Guti's Gorilla Parody, The Great Swanson and the Rola Rola duo.

P-TA District Congress Gets Plan for School Survey Here

A program under which school children will study their own sections and prepare materials to be published in a book for Washington's sesquicentennial celebration next year was proposed yesterday.

Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant 3d, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, presented the plan to the annual convention of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers.

General Grant proposed that the city be divided into 21 neighborhoods with children preparing reports on what used to be located in each area, what is there at present, and future uses of the locality. The chidlren would consider the neighborhood in terms of families, homes, schools, playgrounds, industries, streets, churches, libraries, theaters and health centers, General Grant said.

Material for Book

Stories, pictures, charts and illustrations prepared by the pupils would be printed in pamphlets, and compiled into one book to be called "Our Washington," General Grant said.

The District P-TA congress, opening its two-day convention at the Departmental Auditorium, also heard School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning report on the survey of District schools prepared by Dr. George D. Strayer.

Dr. Corning urged parents to give careful study to the report, which he declared contains "dozens of fine suggestions" for improving the schools.

In particular, he pointed to a section calling for improved medical and psychiatric services for school children.

Ideas Indorsed

The school head listed five recommendations that appear in the report with which he said school officials are in complete agreement. These are the 38 million dollar building program to be financed by a Federal loan, smaller classes, higher pay and sick leave for teachers, and increased funds for operating the schools and for the purchase of supplies and textbooks.

Failure of Congress to enact the $330 Government pay raise for teachers, which is recommended in the Strayer report, has hurt teacher recruitment, Dr. Corning said.

The school superintendent declared that if classrooms are to be cut down to the 30 pupils size recommended by Dr. Strayer 462 additional teachers will be needed. If the District is to maintain its present standard of 36 pupils to the classroom an additional 179 teachers will have to be added, he said.

Mrs. O. G. Hankins, retiring president of the congress, in her annual report, said that the P-TA now has a record membership of more than 27,000 members.

Officers nominated at the meeting will be elected at today's session at 10 a.m. Nominated and unopposed for office are: Mrs. James Cox, president; Mrs. Leo Raywid, Mrs. Andrew Weaver, Mrs. Harold Keesling and Mrs. James S. Merritt, vice presidents; Mrs. Ralph Cole, treasurer; and Mrs. Ural Fisher, assistant treasurer.

In the evening session, Dean J. Harold Fox of the George Washington University School of Education led a panel discussion on "The Home and School as Builders of Character." Dr. Fox favored greater participation by children themselves in the formation of a set of principles on which to build their characters.

Pupils Naming Library for Dead Principal

As a tribute to their former principal, killed in a plane crash in 1947, students at Arlington's James Madison Elementary School will establish a memorial library in her name.

The library, to be dedicated at the school on May 22 at 4 p. m., will honor Miss Louise Brady, teacher and principal at James Madison for eight years prior to her death.

School pupils, working under the direction of Principal Miss Lillian Lambert, are asking Miss Brady's friends and former pupils to contribute funds for the library.

Shelves, installed in Miss Brady's former office, will hold the collection. New selections will be picked by Mrs. Jane Cone, county school librarian. A memorial plaque will be placed in the room.

Miss Brady, a native of Statesville, N. C., was killed September 3, 1947, at the Falls Church Airpark when the private plane in which she was a passenger collided with another and crashed. She formerly lived at 1801 Key blvd., Arlington.

Washington Wins Award In Traffic Law Enforcement

Washington, which has been knocking down traffic awards in lively fashion lately, had another one yesterday.

The International Association of Chiefs of Police handed the city one of 12 awards to cities and States for outstanding performance in traffic law enforcement in 1948. It won the only award in its population class of 500,000 and over.

On Tuesday the American Automobile Association named Washington a grand-award winner for "making the most effective efforts to cut down pedestrian accidents" in 1948.

The National Safety Council's top award for advancement of traffic safety went to the city last month.

Wood Labor Bill Shelved by House

the Wood bill. The Sims substitute was rejected by the House.

Pro-Administration Democrats greeted the recommital "victory" with jubilant cheers, handclaps, and backslapping, even though after five days of debate and voting the House thereby left the Taft-Hartley Act undisturbed. The House never had gotten around to vote on the Lesinski bill, which incorporated the Administration's Taft-Hartley repeal pledge.

Labor leaders, who had indorsed the Lesinski bill, also appeared to be elated over yesterday's recommital vote on the Wood bill.

The recommital, declared AFL President William Green, gives the House Labor Committee "an opportunity to make a new start in drafting legislation to repeal the Taft-Hartley Act."

Secretary of labor Maurice J. Tobin said the House vote was "very encouraging."

On the Senate side, in revealing his own bill to modify the Taft-Hartley Act, Senator Taft said that he was not personally for all 28 proposed amendments in his bill, but was willing to accede to the judgment of the two co-authors of the measure, Sen. Forrest C. Donnell (R., Mo.) and Sen. H. Alexander Smith (R., N.J.).

The three offered their bill as part of the Senate Labor Committee's minority report on the labor relations issue. The committee many weeks ago reported out the Administration-backed bill on an 8-5 party line vote. The Thomas bill is identical to the House-neglected Lesiński bill.

Changes in the Taft-Hartley Act proposed by the Taft-Donnell-Smith bill include the following:

1. In the case of national emergency strikes, the President could ask Congress for special legislation to deal with the dispute; or he could ask a court to authorize a 60-day injunction or seizure of the struck facilities, or both. The Taft-Hartley Act provides for an 80-day cooling-off period enforced by court injunction.

2. The National Labor Relations Board, now having five members, is increased to seven and made bipartisan.

3. The independent status of the General Counsel to the NLRB is eliminated.

4. The ban on the closed shop is retained, but softened so that an employer may by notifying a labor organization of any vacancy and give it a reasonable opportunity to refer qualified applicants for such employment.

5. Employes on strike are permitted to vote in plant representation elections. They are banned from participating in such elections under the Taft-Hartley Act.

6. The outlawing of secondary boycotts is continued, except that employes may refuse to handle struck work.

7. The anti-Communist oath is continued, but made applicable to company as well as union officers.

8. The ban on labor union contributions to political candidates is continued, but the ban on expenditures is eliminated.

Overnight Switches On Wood Bill Listed

By The Associated Press

Overnight vote switches by 10 Southern Democrats helped shelve the Wood labor bill yesterday after the House had tentatively approved it Tuesday night.

The 10 who voted with the Administration yesterday but not Tuesday were Bolton and Fallon (Md.); Evins (Tenn.); Harris, Hays, Norrell and Tackett (Ark.); Hardy (Va.); Herlong and Peterson (Fla.)

Other voting fluctuations:

O'Brien (Mich.) and Whitaker (Ky.), absent Tuesday, voted to recommit yesterday. Both are Democrats.

Fulton (Pa.) and Patterson (Conn.), Republicans who voted against the Wood bill, voted against recommitting it.

Bulwinkle (D., N. C.) was paired for the Wood bill and voted against recommitting it.

Cooley (D., N. C.) was paired against the Wood bill, and voted to recommit it.

Rayburn Discounts Talk of Truman Trip

House Speaker Rayburn yesterday told reporters he knows that President Truman has no plans for a "whistle-stop" appeal to the people for his legislative program so long as Congress is in session.

There had been talk that Mr. Truman might take to his speaking campaign train if Congress turned him down on effective repeal of the Taft-Hartley law.

Fellow Workers Of Cancer Victim Give $142 To Fund

Employes of the Extension Service, Agriculture Department, yesterday contributed $142.65 in a memorial fund to fight cancer, honoring a department cancer victim, Miss Bertha M. Bennett, of Arlington.

Announcement of the gift was made by the American Cancer Society headquarters here. Miss Bennett, the memorial note stated, died of cancer last October 28.

Among other donations to fight cancer were gifts of $300 from students of Strayer's Business College and $300 in memory of Mrs. Sarah Corenfeld, member of the Women's Progressive Club of Washington, who died this week of cancer.

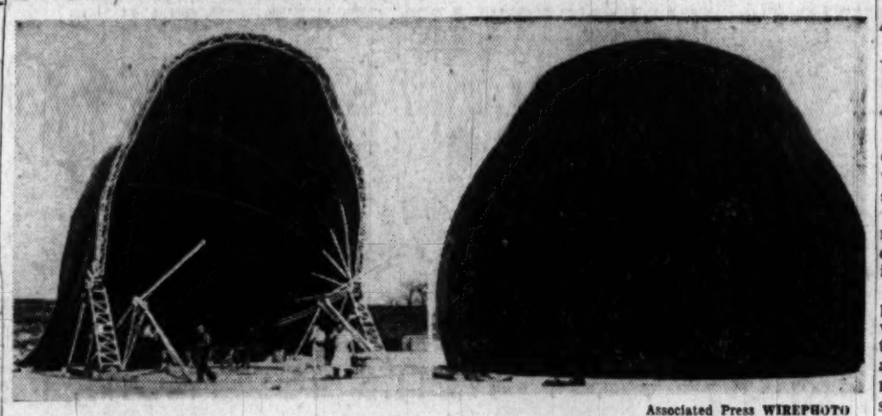
The House Balloon . . .



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

AIR FORCE INNOVATION—Made of glass and rubber, this new house, developed by the Air Force to cover its radar equipment, is inflated like a balloon. Called the Radome, the structure is put into place (left) by a special erection gear of collapsible ribs, which clears the radar apparatus and tower. It resembles a balloon (right) when inflated. It was built in the Watson Laboratories, Air Materiel Command, Red Bank, N. J.

Face-to-Face Meeting Related in Coplon Trial

Andrews said that he didn't know—that he and Miss Manos were "lost," too.

"Oh, God," McAndrews and Miss Manos quoted Miss Coplon as saying.

Defense Attorney Archibald Palmer is seeking to show that this exclamation grew out of the circumstance that Miss Coplon was late for an appointment with Gubitchev, whom she was to meet on Broadway in front of Fort Tryon Park. He has promised to show that she wanted to meet the Russian that night to get an explanation. Gubitchev, according to the defense arguments, told Miss Coplon at a previous meeting that he was a married man, and on this February night told her: "Please go away. My wife's detectives are following me."

Prosecutors John M. Kelley, jr., and Raymond P. Whearty have been trying to show that Miss Coplon traveled in a "circuitous" way when she went to New York for her nocturnal trysts with Gubitchev.

FBI Agent McAndrews and Miss Manos told the jury yesterday that they broke off their surveillance of Miss Coplon shortly after she asked them for directions in Fort Tryon Park. McAndrews explained that this was necessary since she knew what they looked like.

Miss Coplon and Gubitchev were arrested in New York on the night of March 4 and charged with conspiracy to commit espionage. A little later, Miss Coplon was indicted separately in the District of Columbia and charged with taking and copying FBI secrets while she was employed as a political analyst in the Department of Justice. She is being tried on that charge now.

Helped Nurse in Search

Miss Manos, a tall brunette with a bonnet-shaped white hat over her bangs, was the third witness yesterday, being called after Agent McAndrews.

She said that she was at FBI headquarters in Foley Square in New York after Miss Coplon was brought in.

"Did you see Miss Coplon stripped that night?" Defense Attorney Palmer asked.

Miss Manos said she helped strip her.

"I acted as one of the matrons," she said, and explained that Genevieve A. Chara, a registered nurse, served as the other matron.

"So she became naked and stood there before you naked?" Palmer asked.

Mis Manos said that was so.

Palmer brought out that Miss Manos had trailed Miss Coplon and then acted as matron at the direction of her superior, FBI Agent Robert R. Granville.

"Did Mr. Granville say he was trying to catch this girl as a spy?" Palmer asked.

"The only thing he told me," Miss Manos said, "was that I was to 'surveil' her on the night of February 18."

The FBI chief clerk said that on March 4, shortly before 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon, Granville asked her if she would work late that night to act as a matron in the case of Miss Coplon.

"He said she was being brought in," Miss Manos testified.

Miss Coplon was arrested that night at about 9:30 o'clock.

Attorney Palmer drew Miss Manos out on this carefully to show that the FBI expected to arrest his client hours before she was actually arrested. He has argued that the FBI had no right to arrest her without first obtaining a warrant. He has argued also that the FBI arrested her first and tried to build up a case against her afterward.

Prosecutor Kelley objected to Palmer's no-warrant argument yesterday.

"The court has ruled that it was a legal arrest," he said.

Questioning Miss Manos, Kelley asked if Agent Granville had told her on the afternoon that Miss Coplon "would" be brought in or "might" be brought in.

"Might be," Miss Manos said.

Disputes Displease Judge

Attorney Palmer objected vehemently, saying that Kelley was guilty of "rehabilitation" of the witness.

Angry disputes between the opposing counsel, which started on the first day of the trial, were frequent again yesterday. Judge Albert L. Reeves didn't like it, and once made a remark about "penalties" for lawyers.

At one point, Prosecutor Whearty objected to Palmer shouting at Miss Manos.

"I'm trying to keep my voice up," said Palmer, and then turned to four boxes of cough drops he keeps on the rail of the jury box.

He referred to the cough drops as "first aid."

"You wouldn't need it," said Judge Reeves, "if you didn't talk so loud."

Palmer frequently told Miss Manos to look at him instead of looking at the Government attorneys for "succor."

Kelley murmured something about it not being "pleasant" for Miss Manos to look at Palmer.

"I'm a bad dose of castor oil," shouted Palmer.

It was at this point that Judge Reeves made his remark about penalties.

4 Officials Fined $1000

opposed a $750,000 bond issue that was recently considered by the school board.

Instead, Judge Mitchell said, he recommended that the board circulate petitions for a $300,000 bond issue.

The larger amount would have provided for a new consolidated white high school to replace Botetourt and Achilles high schols. It also would have provided for a new Negro high and elementary school combined.

The smaller amount, which was approved by the board but rejected in a special election in March, would have made funds available to improve the Negro Gloucester Training School only.

Martin, in his cross-examination, said he believed the evidence "will show or tend to show that if Mr. Kenney and Mr. Hogge had used diligence, the bond issue would have passed."

The court interposed a question on the relevancy of such a contention, saying "in the final analysis they have only one vote."

The bond issue was defeated by 591 to 368 votes, largely because of the heavy vote against the proposal in Abingdon district.

It was favored in the other two districts of the county, represented on the school board by Gray and Fletcher. Kenney is a resident of Abingdon district, and Hogge is its representative on the school board.

Atlanta Unmasked

The unanimous vote of the Atlanta City Council banning the wearing of masks in public is directed not against goblins of the Halloween variety, but against the hooded damfoolishness of the Ku Klux Klan. The Atlanta authorities showed forthrightness in tackling the problem. The disheartening thing is that it still should be necessary to rely on a legislative unmasking to combat the depredations of the Klan in the capital city of Georgia. The ban, of course, will not end the ignorance, suspicion and prejudice which are the Klan's allies wherever it contrives to operate. But the vote is indicative of the growing contempt in which the Klan is held by law-abiding people in the South as well as of an increasing determination to end the masked hooliganism which has sullied Southern progress.

Clay's Service

Gen. Lucius Clay, who has now resigned his post as Military Governor and Commander in Germany, held the only sector of the cold war with Soviet Russia which ever threatened at any time to turn hot. His nerves are made of iron. During the ordeal of the airlift he never flinched, and he deserves the high praise with which both President Truman and Secretary Acheson have referred to his salient services. The United States may well be proud that it can produce at this critical moment in world history soldiers of the stamp of General Clay.

Clay's organization in Germany, unlike General MacArthur's in Japan, was built on civilian lines of government. It was in this atmosphere that he thrived. He was a soldier, but his branch was the engineers' —where the brains of the military academies traditionally go—and he was in his element in building up and guiding an operation by example and leadership rather than by word of command. Business lost a fine executive when General Clay chose the Army as his career. He worked so hard and long that his associates swore he never slept. Yet his mind never seemed tired, his decisions never disorderly. His precision in what he said and did was almost Prussian-like.

There was a deceptiveness about the cool and gimlet-eyed demeanor of General Clay. Underneath lay a fiery temperament. It has been said that there was a fight wherever Clay happened to be, and the bigger the stage, the better. Be this as it may, he could burn up the communications system with Washington whenever he felt crossed. In these stormy passages he had a habit of threatening to throw in his uniform. His tantrums produced a kind of terror in the Capital, for none appeared to know where to turn for a man who could come anywhere near his stature.

This conflict was generally with the State Department. State shared with War the ultimate responsibility for Germany, and the duality made for difficulty in finding out where authority lay at a particular moment. Shared authority is confused authority. The State Department would not relieve the War Department of its charge in Germany, yet it could not resign responsibility. In the circumstances State Department supervision could not help but be spasmodic and shifting in emphasis, and there was some justification for the sense of grievance which marked Clay's relations with the State Department.

Proconsular statesmanship requires prescience and insight, and General Clay never pretended to have it. His gift was to be the very model of a soldier-administrator —that is to say, he had a rigid sense of duty and an uncanny knack of personifying the high policy of his Government. After Potsdam this was accommodation with Soviet Russia in promoting unity in and toward Germany. Clay labored with might and main to achieve it, and his patience was monumental. When this approach proved futile, he was the expression of the "firmness and patience" of Secretary Byrnes. The time came for downright toughness, and nobody has been tougher than Clay. He headed the partitionists, and the west German government is his child, as much as anybody's. While the government has been aborning he has administered the counterblockade relentlessly.

It is a big man who has lain down one of the biggest jobs ever to be given into American custody. There can be no doubt about that. His task is completed, and he leaves Germany when a new phase of that tortured problem is about to open. The country is well on the road to economic revival, and its political voice has come back. This latter will be heard inside or outside the projected meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers, and will help to determine the new political configuration of Europe.

Bungling Strategy

The defeat that the Administration has sustained is not diminished by the House recommittal of the Wood bill to the Labor Committee. For the action of the House the previous day in rejecting the Lesinski bill in favor of this substitute measure is proof positive that the Administration will either have to accept a labor bill modeled along Taft-Hartley lines or else make up its mind to live with the Taft-Hartley Act.

Responsibility for this political debacle rests squarely upon the shoulders of House leaders who refused until too late to consider reasonable amendments to the defective Administration bill. A good share of the blame for their strategic defeat is attributable to the shortsighted tactics of labor leaders who fought retention of various protective features of the Taft-Hartley Act that have proved their worth, especially provisions for injunctive relief in case of strikes constituting a threat to the national welfare. Finally, the President himself seriously impaired the chances of passage of the Administration bill, first by presenting his lieutenants in Congress with a ready-made bill tailored to fit the specifications of labor leaders, and more recently by trying to coerce Congress into accepting that bill by threatening to deny patronage perquisites to Democrats who voted against it.

The political bungling that led to the rout of the Administration has served at least one good purpose. It has shown that Congress cannot be bullied into passing a one-sided labor bill that fails to protect the interests of management and the public as well as labor. Although the Wood bill failed of passage, the House rejection of the Lesinski bill, even in its hastily-amended form, demonstrated beyond the shadow of a doubt that Congress will not approve any labor bill that does not embody most of the safeguards against abuse embodied in existing legislation. If there is to be any new labor legislation at this session of Congress, the Administration forces will either have to make further concessions to the demands of opponents or risk the possibility of a legislative revolt that might result in passage of a measure quite as stiff as, or even stiffer than, the Wood bill.

The choice, therefore, appears to lie between retention of the Taft-Hartley Act in unamended form or acceptance of a compromise measure that would eliminate or modify those provisions of the law that have proved undesirable or oppressive without destroying essential safeguards against the abuses that prevailed under the old Wagner Act. Unless a reasonable compromise is reached, the Taft-Hartley Act will remain a political issue, and labor unions and antilabor groups will continue to put pressure on members of Congress and candidates for office to indorse or oppose changes in the law that may not be in the public interest.

Labor legislation should, of course, be judged solely on its merits as an instrumentality for insuring a system of collective bargaining fair to employers, employes and the public at large. It is essentially a nonpartisan type of lawmaking, as evidenced by the split party votes in the House. If the Administration had proceeded on that assumption it would not have lost political face by making repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act a partisan issue.

Fair Rent

At first glance the maximum of 30 per cent net operating return allowed landlords under the new rent adjustment formula may seem unduly generous. Possibly the thought of the psychological effect the new scale may have in appeasing property owners was in the minds of the framers of it. Actually the formula is considerably less favorable to landlords than it appears, for the reason that it is figured on the percentage of gross income rather than on the amount of investment.

What the Housing Expediter did was to take the median net operating income of landlords as determined by OPA surveys and use it as the yardstick for determining the "fair net operating income" prescribed in the new rent-control law. Operating income was taken to mean income left after taxes, maintenance and depreciation, but before interest and mortgage payments. For "large" landlords the median amounted to 25 per cent, and for "small" landlords 30 per cent. The Housing Expediter then allowed for a 5 per cent variation below the median. In other words, a small landlord whose operating income is less than 25 per cent of his gross will be entitled to an adjustment to bring the net to 30 per cent. Similarly, a multiunit landlord whose net operating income is less than 20 per cent will qualify for an increase of 25 per cent. It stands to reason from the median that somewhat less than half of all landlords will qualify for adjustments, which will be on an annual basis—and of course the provisions will not apply to the District of Columbia.

Immediately several loopholes in the formula spring to mind. There can be no doubt that it discriminates against landlords whose net income is within the 5 per cent variance allowed. For example, a small landlord with a 26 per cent net return would get no relief, whereas another owner with a 24 per cent return would be entitled to a raise to 30 per cent. This inequity is hard to justify; if an arbitrary figure must be taken as a fair return, why allow any deviation from it? The discrepancy may put a premium on sharp practices by landlords within the 5 per cent group to increase their expenditures —say through unnecessary maintenance— and thus qualify for the 30 per cent return. Moreover, the new formula will have the effect of penalizing landlords who have a heavy proportion of mortgage and interest charges, since these payments are not figured in allowable operating deductions.

With all the objections to the new scale, it still is doubtful whether any really equitable procedure could have been worked out under the vague "fair net operating income" requirement set by Congress. What is a fair income? Probably the only thorough way to figure it would be on the basis of the current value of each property; and to appraise each rental property would have required a staff of gigantic proportions. The Housing Expediter's formula is a compromise, and if it is not wholly satisfactory neither is the glib wording of the rent-control law. The answer to the confusion is for Congress to concentrate on a workable housing law that will help obviate the need for rent control.

Israel's Birthday

One year has gone by since the existence of the new state of Israel was proclaimed; it has been recognized by 45 nations; yet it is still denied recognition by the United Nations. The loss is not Israel's so much as the world's. Israel has shown a political maturity and a sense of independence quite remarkable for a one year old born in the midst of extraordinary difficulties. It is bad enough to have to try to set up new institutions while in such a state of no-peace with neighbors as to forbid demobilization. But this is only one of the obstacles which have been frustrating the development of statehood; for instance, there were no police records upon which to build the administration of justice. As for the world, the loss involved in postponing the election of Israel as the fifty-ninth member of the United Nations is measured by the deterioration in the Middle East. Israel has all the attributes of an island of stability, and these should be and could be used for the common benefit.

All the combatants in the Middle East—except Syria—have agreed upon an armistice with Israel. As for Syria, the new Zaim regime is pursuing a policy which is mystifying all foreign observers, and seems to be aimed at creating intra-Arab trouble. The new dictator is not represented at Lausanne, where the U. N. Conciliation Committee has just opened its sessions with the view of turning armistice into peace, and this in itself is a handicap. But the main trouble about Syria, as about the wider question of peace in the Middle East, continues to be the lack of a forward-looking Anglo-American policy. With such a policy the Arabs would find no excuse for shilly-shallying. Without it, as the correspondents are reporting from Lausanne, the Arabs are "figuratively looking over their shoulders at Lake Success." As long as U. N. admission of Israel is held up, Arab governments cannot hope to get any domestic support for any kind of constructive action—on anything, let alone the status of Jerusalem, which, apparently, is the reason for some of the member nations' hesitation at Lake Success.

Israel is reported to be impatient to begin the task of reconstruction—a task which it envisages in terms of cooperation with the neighboring countries. To the suspicious this is taken to be a sign that Israel wants to grab neighboring territory. No sooner is one scare about Israel removed than another shows its head! It used to be said that Israel would be the headquarters of Soviet intrigue in the Middle East. With a new state, burning with pride in itself and touched with nationalism, such a fear was not even intelligent. As for potential aggression, the answer here is to guarantee frontiers and guide a common reconstruction under safeguards imposed in a development program under President Truman's Point IV.

Renewable Resources

Delegates to the thirty-seventh annual meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce here Wednesday heard a round-table discussion of how a continued yield from natural resources is related to industry. It is highly significant that businessmen participated in the discussion. For, as several of the authoritative speakers pointed out, not only does much of industry depend for its existence on sound conservation practices, but industry also holds at least part of the answer through development of scientific methods and contributing to improvement in the low living standards that cause both population pressure and a drain on resources.

There is no cause for smugness, for the problem is far from licked, and despite all the expert efforts to restore productivity to soil, water and timber are being wasted far faster than they are being replenished. What the delegates heard, however, was not a discourse by apostles of gloom, but reasons for hope that a partnership of agriculture, industry and an awakened public may halt the devastation. In no small measure the ultimate peace of the world depends on intelligent management of natural resources, and the United States, which owes so much to its natural endowment, ought to take the lead in protecting that birthright for the future.

Carrier Parable

The recent action of the Secretary of Defense in stopping the construction of the USS United States, which action was applauded in a couple of your editorials, brings to mind a parable.

A wise man was forced to leave his child and to travel afar. He left the child in the care of a physician, an undertaker, and a minister. He also appointed a review board, which for want of a better name he called the Weapons System Evaluation Group, and he left his old servant as general overseer.

One day the child had violent pains in his abdomen and the servant called in the physician, the undertaker and the minister. The physician diagnosed appendicitis and proposed to operate immediately. The servant polled the physician, the undertaker and the minister, announced that the decision was two to one against the operation. He ordered the child to continue without treatment.

The Weapons Evaluation Group, composed of eminent scientists, never even heard of the case, and it is said that The Washington Post in a pair of editorials praised the servant for taking prompt and decisive action. The newspaper parried the physician's criticism of the servant's judgment by remarking that the physician was probably not a very ethical surgeon anyhow, and that the servant was backed by a two to one decision of a group most expert in caring for the child.

On his return the father was unhappy. This was not reasonable, for he was assured that the undertaker had done a fine job of embalming (even removing the appendix with no pain at all to the child) and that the minister had preached a touching funeral service. H. Q. SMITH.

Inhuman Police

Your motion picture critic has always been my favorite. However, Mr. Coe's April 26 criticism of "Knock on Any Door," shows bad taste on his part in failing to recognize the true conditions existing not only in Washington, but also in other cities throughout the country.

Mr. Coe is perhaps right in his statement that the book and the picture throws a bad light on the law enforcement bodies of our country and depict the prosecuting attorney as anything but a human being. Well, many of our policemen and prosecuting attorneys are just that.

Granted that juvenile delinquency is brought about by home ties and environment, the law itself often helps make juvenile delinquents by such tactics as shown throughout the book and the picture.

Not all law enforcement officials are inhuman, but each city has its few who are and thereby cause the people to think ill of the entire body.

Arlington Farms

Our letter is in reply to the one signed "M.C.R.", which appeared on April 30.

First, with relation to unemployment among veterans, civil service grants every preference to any veteran requesting employment with the Government, thereby giving him a very great advantage over any girls who seek the same type of employment.

Second, the veteran receives training under the G. I. bill thereby fitting him for competition in higher salaried or specialized fields of employment. Third, with respect to the comment "The patriotism that brought the girls here," apparently the writer is unaware of the fact that the girls are STILL being brought to Washington at the request of the Government through extensive recruiting programs.

M.C.R. states that "the Government is not able to support such projects as Arlington Farms." Residents of the Farms are not asking for charity. They are willing to pay reasonable increases in rent. It would seem to us that it is to the veterans' advantage that the Farms remain open to leave the few suitable housing accommodations in existence at the disposal of the veterans and their families.

Church Responsibility

Refusal by the Presbyterian churches of the Washington area to agree to accept Negro ministers in the Pulpit Exchange Plan leaves all Christians with heavy and grieving hearts.

Such practices shake the faith of the strong Christian who believes in the church and it destroys completely the faith of the weak who believe little in the church. The church through its teachings has the greatest responsibility in the preservation of our democracy. If it fails the democracy falls with it.

Finger Painting

I am very much interested in an article in your April 30 issue entitled "Psychologist Cites Finger Art as Key to Child's Emotion."

Dr. William L. Granatir, director of the Washington Institute of Mental Health, gives an explanation of a finger painting done by a repressed small client of his. The picture—a bird flying free over mountain ranges. Far below a small figure hemmed in by cliffs. The explanation—the small hemmed-in figure was the child. The bird symbolizes the free person he would like to have been.

To me this seems a bit far fetched. All young children draw and paint birds. In the first place, paint books are full of birds and birds on the wing are so easy to draw. The same goes for mountains and cliffs. Painting the human figure in is natural to all artists, past and present. However, most immature artists have a tendency to paint the human figure larger than the mountains, trees, etc.

And as for the freedom of birds on the wing, I claim this to be a poetic fallacy. A bird is a prey to larger birds and a target for hunters old and young. To stay in the air he must work like a dog. Even at that he may symbolize true freedom, for all real freedom must be worked at constantly—a little sleep—a little slumber —a little folding of the wings— and out goes freedom like a light.

People often say freedom when they mean escape. The two are not synonymous!

"Balance In Housing"

Your editorial of April 23, "Balance in Housing," is a rather unbalanced appraisal of the housing bill passed by the Senate and now before the House.

The main theme is that private industry is building high-priced houses for the wealthier families and that the bill would remedy this top-heavy housing situation by providing a designated number of low-cost housing units for families at the bottom. While you recognize that the 810,000 low-cost units proposed for the next six years would be only one step forward in the long stretch of housing needs ahead, you still have failed to identify the real problem in achieving a balanced housing supply, namely, how to tap the great middle market in housing.

The 810,000 units proposed are public housing units, which means that the Government would absorb part of the rent bill. However, the relatively small number of public housing units to be built each year and the rigorous eligibility requirements will restrict this new housing to families of the very lowest incomes. Between this narrow segment of assisted families at the bottom and the narrow segment of well-to-do families at the top, a great void of housing need remains.

I concur heartily with your disapproval of the 20 per cent gap—the requirement that public housing units cannot be built in any community unless the upper rental limits for such housing are separated by at least 20 per cent from the lowest rents of acceptable private housing. Low-rent public housing does not invade the field of private housing but merely supplements it for a small part of the population. I have eliminated the 20 per cent gap requirement and certain other unduly restrictive provisions in my draft of comprehensive housing legislation, H. R. 3877.

Your editorial says: "We can see no good reason why public housing should not be available to any low-income families for whom private enterprise cannot provide." Since you acknowledge that "private industry has been supplying homes for families in the upper income brackets," you allow the inference that the Government should subsidize part of the housing costs for many millions of families not in the "higher income brackets." This is hardly a feasible proposition in the present state of legislative thinking, and therefore it becomes a matter of extreme urgency to seek new incentives for low-cost housing that is free of Government rent subsidies.

The housing research program proposed in the Senate bill is designed to stimulate ways and means of lowering building costs. Other provisions relate to slum clearance, urban redevelopment and farm housing.

The additional important proposal has been made, with bipartisan support, that the Federal Government make direct loans at low interest rates to groups of prospective homeowners organized in mutual ownership or cooperative housing corporations, or to other nonprofit corporations complying with certain legal or administrative requirements.

The Senate Banking and Currency Committee did not include the provision for direct loans to mutual ownership or cooperative groups in the bill it reported out for Senate action. With the thought of presenting a more rounded housing bill, I introduced H. R. 3877, which contains this loan feature in a title relating to housing for lower middle income families.

Volunteer Aid In Cold War

By Malvina Lindsay

Monopoly Weapon

THE MAN in the observation car was sputtering about taxes, foreign aid, cost of the cold war. Oh, he was willing to grant we had to hold the line against communism in western Europe but . . . well it was costing too much. . . . The old story of Government waste.

Then why, asked a passenger returning from Europe, didn't private enterprise take over part of the job? Didn't it have everything at stake in the outcome? Didn't it have a record of doing big things successfully? Why was American production —including management and labor—doing so little in the war of ideas?

What could it do, the businessman asked, except be taxed?

It could do plenty, the challenger pointed out. Provide more pencils, copy books, paper, other simple equipment needed in the fight against illiteracy. Produce and send to remote areas abroad lively, interesting films faithfully portraying American life. Step up the sharing of knowledge on nutrition, child care, technology—through books and magazines printed in foreign languages. Promote the one big step most immediately urgent in winning friends for this country—exchange of persons.

BUT, demurred the businessman, wasn't the State Department supposed to be doing all this? Wasn't he paying taxes to support the Voice of America?

Yes, and it was doing a good job, he was told. But far more needed to be done, and done quickly and imaginatively on a big—yes a "colossal" scale. Business interests, labor unions, agricultural organizations, 4-H clubs, religious groups, professional bodies, all these should be sending people abroad not to propagandize, but to find means of sharing the democracy they enjoyed. More foreign persons from all walks of life should be brought here.

But, objected the businessman, those things cost money.

Not as much as another war, was the reply. Probably no more than a big promotional campaign to increase profits.

But wasn't ERP supposed to be feeding western Europe, helping it get on its feet productively?

Yes, but this sort of thing was for the long pull. All previous expenditure might be wasted if the people affected turned to dictators in the future. Now was the time to encourage them in the technique of becoming their own masters. Wouldn't that be a long-range defense of the American system?

"We-ll," conceded the businessman, "maybe . . . if enough people . . ."

INCREASINGLY Americans returning from abroad stress what the individual or group here can do in cold war strategy. Also they urge more exchange of persons. For this human ammunition is one weapon on which the West has a monopoly. The East may excel in propaganda and promises, but it cannot—or will not—open its doors and say "Let's visit back and forth and share each other's ideas."

Mrs. Marc Law, who spent four months in Italy for the National League of Women Voters, came home fired with the possibilities of what person-to-person contact can do in winning friends for this country and adherents to its ideals. But she warns that Americans cannot be effective abroad if they try to sell, peddle or propagandize their system. They must go abroad in the spirit of getting as well as of giving.

Mrs. Law's experience in Italy convinced her that propaganda of any kind will have only superficial effects and is likely to backfire disastrously. If Americans want to convince the world of the worth of their system, they must, above all, make it work at home, then be ready to share its benefits technologically, socially, personally, with other peoples.

A highly successful program of worker exchange with Germany in 1925 has caused the Rockefeller Foundation to sponsor such an exchange again. Fifty workers, half of them from Germany, the rest from other countries, soon will come to the United States for a two-year period. Equal numbers of Americans will go abroad. Of the 500 Germans who came to the United States in 1925 for two years, none became a Nazi Party leader, and all remained friends of the United States.

Patronage Votes

I have been listening to the various comments on the radio and have read all the stories in The Washington Post on the recent statement by President Truman on "patronage" and who is to get what. One Senator was all set to vote for repeal of the Taft-Hartley Law and after the statement refused to commit his vote. This, according to the "vote liver uppers" has been repeated time and time again.

Such quibbling statements are about the best propaganda Joe Stalin could ever hope for against a democracy. Yes, when we openly admit that our elected legislators don't vote with their conscience but vote with their eyes only on their reelection, it is a pretty sad state of affairs.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Problem Of Soviet Withdrawal

MORE EVIDENCE is now at hand to indicate that Moscow is executing one of the great changes of direction from West to East, from Europe to Asia, which have been so characteristic not only of Communist but of Russian policy. There is now an offer from the rebel government to end the Greek civil war through the United Nations by the appointment of a mediator like Dr. Ralph Bunche. There is also fairly good reason to think that the Soviet pressure on Scandinavia and on Iran and Turkey has been relaxed.

LIPPMANN

These developments follow closely upon the preliminary success of the Jessup-Malik conversations which promise to lead eventually to a Soviet proposal to withdraw the Red army from the center of Europe.

THE OFFER from the Greek rebels is particularly interesting. It comes through the Minister of Justice, Mr. Miltades Porphyrogenis, who, what with newsprint costing so much, it will be convenient to call Mr. P. Now Mr. P. either is or has just been in Prague, and his request for a visa so that he may fly to Lake Success is backed by the Czechoslovak Foreign Minister, Dr. Clementis.

This is not the first, but actually the second, of the recent attempts to settle the Greek civil war by diplomacy. The previous attempt was made through secret negotiations between Marshal Tito and Mr. Tsaldaris of the Athens government. But Mr. Tsaldaris spoiled those negotiations by a leak—whether calculated or plain stupid no one seems quite sure—to the London Daily Mail. Tito, who is a hard pressed man, could not afford an additional quarrel with the fiercest Communists. He had to draw away. Then, it appears that Dr. Clementis, who is still reasonably respectable in Cominform circles, seems to have seized the ball from Tito and—no doubt with the approval of Mr. Vishinsky—has helped Mr. P. to start running with it.

It looks very much, therefore, as if the Kremlin wanted to get the credit for itself of sweetening the atmosphere of the Council of Foreign Ministers by conciliation in Greece.

THUS the signs continue to multiply that Stalin did in fact decide—quite some time ago, it may be definitely at the time of Zhdanov's death—that a recession in Europe could, as so often in Rusian history, run parallel with an advance in Asia. It is probably no coincidence that the timetable for knocking over the Nationalist regime in China has been speeded up. The Chinese Communists would probably have preferred to take on more slowly the responsibility of administering and feeding so many people. But the Soviet position is unmistakably better now that the European negotiations can be made to begin with Western influence at its lowest ebb in eastern Asia.

This is what the few highly placed European Communists I have been able to talk with were predicting confidently as long ago as November. Thus far the course of events has borne out their predictions.

IF THE hypothesis is correct—it is still only the most plausible hypothesis—that Stalin is on the road to a withdrawal in Europe, then what are his most likely objectives? I think we must start with the premise that he realizes the great dangers of a withdrawal. He can entertain few of the illusion.., which are so fashionable in the West, that Soviet influence and power in eastern Europe and in Germany can be maintained reliably through the local Communist parties, the secret police and Soviet agents.

Tito alone is conclusive evidence to the contrary. The idea that Germany or even Poland could be made a dependable satellite of Moscow—after the Red army retired—is one of those notions that a realist like Stalin is not likely to delude himself with.

STALIN'S real preoccupation must be, it seems to me, to insure himself against the rise of violently anti-Soviet regimes in Germany and in eastern Europe after the withdrawal of the Red army. That, I think, is the explanation for the violent and senseless efforts in Hungary and elsewhere to liquidate everything and everybody which could participate in a successor government to the existing Communist governments.

Stalin must be afraid that the only alternative to communism in eastern Europe is a new kind of fascism. There lies his greatest problem—how to protect himself as he withdraws from being followed right up to his frontiers by a tide of irreconcilable enmity.

THERE are strong indications, I believe, that Stalin will now attempt to solve his problem—that of locking the European door against an anti-Russian coalition—by resorting to the classic device of Russian statesmen. He will seek an arrangement, eventually an alliance, with Germany. If he can achieve that, he has nothing much to fear from the Poles and the Hungarians, and from western Europe.

There are great difficulties, but not insuperable difficulties, ahead of him. The greatest certainty is that an understanding with Germany cannot be consummated without a quarrel with the Poles. For there can be no full arrangement with Germany which does not call for the return of much of the German territory annexed by Poland. But apart from that issue, which the Germans and the Russians have several times in history found ways of settling at the expense of the Poles, there are no insuperable ethnic or ideological obstructions to an arrangement which has such enormously strong roots in Russian and German national self-interest.

WE MAY, I think, have confidence that the new directors of our German and European policy will not be unprepared for what is ahead of them. But their difficult task is made more difficult by the great amount of misinformation and miscalculation which they have inherited, which they cannot openly disavow until they have in fact readjusted our policy to the realities.

Washington Calling

Food For Propaganda

OUT AT Naval Medical Hospital in nearby Bethesda former Secretary of efense James Forrestal is recovering from complete nervous exhaustion. This condition was brought on by months and months of vain struggle to unify the armed services under the so-called unification act on top of seven years of wartime service in the Navy Department.

Childs

Immediately after his successor, Louis Johnson, took office, Forrestal went to Hobe Sound, Fla., for a vacation. There he suffered a collapse and was flown to the naval hospital. Officialdom in the Pentagon Building stupidly tried to conceal the seriousness of Forrestal's condition, announcing that he had gone for a "routine checkup."

A few nights later in one of his weekly broadcasts Drew Pearson described Forrestal as being "out of his mind." He said that in Florida the former Secretary of Defense had heard a fire siren and had rushed into the street saying that the Russians were attacking.

Pearson implied that Forrestal had been mentally unbalanced prior to his resignation and suggested that the decisions he took in his last months in office be reviewed. That broadcast, giving what Forrestal's family and friends say was a false picture of his illness, has become the base of a widespread Communist propaganda campaign.

IN SOVIET RUSSIA and in certain of the satellite nations millions are being led to believe that Forrestal's "insanity" is the explanation for the Marshall Plan and the Atlantic Pact. It is hinted that while Forrestal's condition is acute, all American policy-makers suffer from the same phobia.

A dispatch from the official Soviet news agency, Tass, was widely carried in the Russian press. It was played up in such a way as to show the United States chief of defense in despair and defeat.

The May 1 issue of Pravda, which circulates throughout the Soviet Union, carried a five column wide cartoon with the caption "Club Aggressors." The cartoon showed Forrestal in a straitjacket lecturing to Winston Churchill, John Foster Dulles and others.

In the cartoon a hospital orderly restrains Forrestal who crouches on all four on a pedestal. An accompanying verse says that not the strait-jacket but the will of those who do not want war is preventing Forrestal's freedom of action.

The propaganda line has been carried even further in certain satellite countries. On April 13 The Trybuna Ludu of Warsaw, central organ of the Polish Communist Party, carried a long dispatch datelined New York. It said in part:

"Insanity. Diagnosis: persecution mania. Patient: James Forrestal, Minister of War of the United States, who resigned his post two weeks ago. Symptoms: a few days ago upon hearing the siren of a fire truck passing his house, the patient rushed into the street in his underwear, shouting, "The Russians are invading the city!" The doctors declared that the patient had long been suffering from psychic disturbances, even when he was still fulfilling his official functions. Now the illness had taken a dangerous form. The doctors' recommendation: immediate isolation of the patient in a hospital for the insane.

"AS REPORTED by the well-known American radio commentator, Drew Pearson, President Truman gave orders to immediately review all reports, recommendations and decisions of his minister for military affairs.

"We understand that the President of the United States is in a pitiful situation. He wants to find out for himself whether Mr. Forrestal went mad under the pressure of cold-war propaganda, which he himself had carried on for years, or whether the opposite is true, whether all that propaganda was the consequence of the insanity which had seized Mr. Forrestal a long time ago."

The insidiousness of this propaganda needs no underscoring. According to observers just back from Europe, Communist speakers in France are taking the same line.

No sensible person would advocate keeping back legitimate news in this country because it might serve as propaganda for communism abroad. But details of the mental illness of a private individual, true or false, are not, in my opinion, legitimate news even though that individual may have held high office. Any effort to keep back news the public should legitimately have opens the way for sensationalism and exaggeration.

Secretary Johnson recently visited Forrestal and reported him as recovering rapidly with the prospect that within a few weeks he would be able to make a survey trip around the world as requested by Johnson. The new Secretary has taken one of the decisions that balked his predecessor and he is learning how very painful and difficult the new job is.

Hospitals Cooperate with Local Practitioners

program can meet the problem with the help of the Johns Hopkins teaching program for visiting nurses, the Visiting Nurse Association and the Public Health Nursing Service for communicable disease. But the need is growing beyond the city's facilities. In the rural counties where the program is 3½ years old, greatly increased staffs of visiting nurses are the prime necessity.

The clinic is also turning up a vast number of people who show medical neglect, in tuberculosis, venereal disease and children's diseases. The most significant aspect of the clinic's physical examinations is the preventive work, especially for children, under the supervision of the local practitioners.

All druggists are cooperating in the program. The total cost of free medicine and medical supplies such as enema bags, bandages, cotton and other necessities is high, as there is no restriction either on the type of drug or the price and quantity of prescriptions. In January the total bill for the program in the two clinics now operating was $3000 for 8200 registered relief clients. This is below the budget of $40,000 for the year. But 40 per cent of the 15,000 relief cases assigned to the clinics by the Welfare Department, have not yet registered.

Serious Handicap

THE SHORTAGE of Negro doctors in Baltimore as throughout the State is a serious handicap. About 20 per cent of Baltimore's one million citizens are Negroes. Only 90 out of 1600 doctors in Baltimore are Negroes. The percentage of Negroes among the indigent is 80 per cent.

Only a few white physicians in the Johns Hopkins area where most of the indigents live, will accept Negro patients or go to their homes. As a result, although the existing number of Negro doctors are cooperating wholeheartedly, many of the clinic's Negro clients cannot be assigned to a private practitioner. The clinic itself looks after them.

Dr. Chant thinks the situation presents a great opportunity for any young Negro doctor. He could take over immediately a patient load of 500 to 1000 people that would guarantee him a living of $3500 to $7000 and at the same time he could continue his postgraduate training through the relationship of the health plan to Johns Hopkins Hospital.

The clinic has an advisory committee consisting of two of the local doctors and two members of the staff. It acts as a liaison between the clinic and the neighborhood physicians. The director of the clinic, Dr. Chant, is chairman. This committee irons out unforeseen difficulties, provides a means of discussing various kinds of problems, medical or otherwise, that arise among clients, and serves as a general clearing house for complaints and advice. It is a general shock absorber for the plan.

Modest Start

THE program began modestly with only two clinics and confined the treatment to indigents, as neither the hospitals nor the City Department of Health were certain that the experiment would be a success. Judging, however, by the proprietary attitude of the clients, it would be tragic if not impossible to do anything but expand the program and admit the medically indigent by a screening process similar to that used in the State program. The State of Maryland and the City of Baltimore have demonstrated that the local community, whether it be a county or a city, working with the State health and welfare authorities, can solve the health problems of the lowest income groups with efficiency, and economy, with free cooperation, and with a minimum of compulsion.

The private resources of every voluntary hospital throughout the country are now swamped by the responsibility to care for patients described by Johns Hopkins as "the poor of this city and State of all races who are stricken down by any casualty." It is but reasonable that the State and City governments should take over the full cost of this responsibility.

The State of Maryland and City of Baltimore have set up machinery whereby Federal aid could be given if it proves necessary, without the imposition of Federal control and the consequent danger of political interference with medical problems. That is why the achievement have significance for the country as a whole.

Dr. Harry L. Chant, director of the new Johns Hopkins clinic, interviews a young patient

Doctors' Attitude

THE attitude of the doctors toward the program was summed up for me by Dr. Leo Schlenger, who has been in practice in the neighborhood over 20 years. In addition to his established practice, he takes care of 150 relief clients.

"The per capita payment of $7 is so small that it takes a beginner who needs a start or a humanitarian to come into the program. But many of us have cooperated through fear of getting compulsory health insurance. And why shouldn't we fear it? This program like everything free, is open to abuse. But we doctors can control this abuse by being frank with the clinic authorities. This control is possible because we are working with and for a hospital and not with and for politicians. If political control came in, this abuse would grow to endless dimensions.

"For example, now if I cannot restrain the use of the program by some patient, I can say so and somebody else takes him.

"Under a Federal political program—and every Federally controlled program is political—the patient would run to the ward leader and the ward leader would crack down on me. It wouldn't be the politician's fault as he would lose votes if he did not pay attention to the demands of his constituents. It would be utterly impossible to keep this political pressure out of a compulsory health insurance program.

"Moreover, if the problem of a public health program is not approached gradually as we are doing it, the quality of medical care would soon be very poor, as every doctor would be overloaded and could not give proper follow-up care.

"For complete care of our Negro population, for example, we need several hundred additional Negro doctors in the City of Baltimore, and I don't know how many more in the State. Moreover, the doctors would have no time for consultation, lectures, clinics and other educational opportunities, which all the doctors, especially the younger ones, appreciate so much in the Baltimore Health Plan, that they are willing to make sacrifices to come into the program. As a result of this training, medical care in this whole area is improving and will keep on improving, instead of being impeded by a mass inundation.

"It is far better to preserve and pull up our standards of medical care even if we have to go slow and neglect a few people at first. If we try to take everybody on with inadequate personnel and our present limited facilities, we shall have nothing for anybody. By the gradual methods we are using, we shall learn how to give good medical protection to all the people. In fact, we can already visualize how this could be done, but even the soundest plan cannot outrun the local resources of doctors, nurses and hospitals."

Protective Wings

WHAT the Baltimore plan does, is to reach out the protective wings of the hospital over the whole indigent population of the city, whether the individual is in immediate need of medical care or not, without disrupting the complex medical structure already achieved or destroying the independence of the local practitioners.

The immense resources of Johns Hopkins Hospital and Maryland University are linked with those of local physicians through the two new medical care clinics, to give to the indigent and especially to their children, the same chance for health and well-being as is enjoyed by the children of the well-to-do.

As both hospitals are situated in the slums of Baltimore, what the plan in general accomplishes is the social extension of the hospitals' functions into the neediest sections of the city, and the establishment of contacts with the neighboring physicians who heretofore were as isolated from its influence as any doctor practicing in the remotest corner of the State. The new clinic of the Medical Service Department is a liaison and clearing house between the hospital and the community.

As we examine the organization and results of the Baltimore plan for medical care of the indigent, it becomes evident that this redefinition of the hospital's role in modern society can be readily extended to the medically indigent. Eventually it can make the same preventive and curative program available to the rest of the population by covering the costs now met by the State through voluntary insurance.

"Thus a State or national health program is not a problem in medical economics," says Dr. Reed, "but a problem in organization of services. Once the services and the administrative methods are clarified by a plan such as this, the economic aspects can be figured as definitely as in actuarial life insurance. That is why we cannot answer the problems posed by a national health program quickly but must go at them in an evolutionary manner."

Baby Deaths In Mexican Town Halved

Infant mortality has been halved during two years in the Mexican border community of Neuvo Laredo through international cooperation toward better health, it was disclosed yesterday.

Miss Kathrine F. Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau, Federal Security Agency, announced the results here.

She described the dramatic reduction in infant deaths as the result of cooperation of a Children's Bureau nurse and Mexican health workers. Comparative infant death rates for the town outside Texas were: 1946, 223 deaths for each 1000 live births; 1948, 112.

For her work in instructing Mexican midwives in better childbirth practices and for her cooperation in helping Mexican doctors and nurses obtain training in United States hospitals, the nurse, Miss Caroline G. Russell, was commended by the Mexican government last week, Miss Lenroot said. Dr. Rafael P. Gamboa, Mexico's chief of public health and welfare, presented his government's special citation to Miss Russell.

Miss Lenroot pointed out that success of the border maternal and child health and welfare program was due to the teamwork of workers assigned there by both countries. Miss Guillermina Rodriguez, social worker, was assigned by the Mexico Bureau of Child Health and Welfare in the midwife training program.

Participation of the United States Children's Bureau in the work in Mexico was made possible through allocation of funds from the State Department in its program for cooperation with the American republics through the Interdepartmental Committee on Scientific and Cultural Cooperation, Miss Lenroot said.

Unpleasant Wife Softens 'Impact'

By Richard L. Coe

"IMPACT," at the Unnatural National, has as much impact as a sponge, though its warning that there's nothing worse than a faithless wife may fret the suspicious.

The things that happen to Brian Donlevy in this picture because of his evil wife shouldn't happen to George Raft. Helen Walker plays the wicked witch, the most unpleasant female to hit the screen in some time.

What makes "Impact" impactless is that she's also more than a bore. She's the kind that gets coddled by her successful husband in a penthouse apartment, where she eats candy, nurses headaches and talks into one of those white telephones.

I don't know what it is about Hollywood script writers, but they certainly don't speak well of their wives. Their idea of marriage seems to make wives a minus-zero quality, cuddly creatures who bask before boudoir mirrors which slide back to reveal enough clothes to costume the world's hundred best-dressed women. The little things are such dull dregs personally, however evil inherently, that I can't get worked up over the distress they bring.

Miss Walker, it turns out, has been playing around with a slippery fish named Tony Barrett, to give him his off-stage, nonacting handle. Tony cooks up a scheme to kill Donlevy while they're driving on a lonely highway, put the blame on an imaginary hitch-hiker, which means Helen will get Donlevy's juicy estate and Tony will get Helen.

Things go awry when Tony doesn't quite kill Donlevy, barges into an oil truck while speeding from the scene of the crime, thus making ashes of Tony, which everyone assumes are Donlevy's. Realizing what happened, Donlevy gets away from it all by becoming a mechanic for garage manager Ella Raines. Back in San Francisco, the police uncover some sort of alliance between Helen and Tony, who the police think is still alive. Helen's about to fry, Ella persuades Brian to save her and the police then assume Brian plotted Tony's murder.

If you still care, you can find out how it unravels for yourself. It's not an extra-long picture, but it seems like one of the longest ever screened.

There are some natural scenes of the real San Francisco, which lend a deal of credibility that the writers and director manage to dissipate. Anna May Wong returns to the screen as a maid-witness and you'll also get some scenes from another oldtime star, Mae Marsh, who plays Ella's wise mother.

"IMPACT." United Artist release produced for Harry M. Popkin by Leo C. Popkin. Screen play by Dorothy Reid and Jay Dratler. Photographed by Ernest Laszlo. Directed by Arthur Lubin. At the National.

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK—One of Albert Einstein's friends visited him a few days ago and discussed the program of the new state of Israel. He mentioned the long years in which Einstein had been an ardent Zionist, and asked the scientist if he planned to take a trip to the new state . . . "When I was younger, it was always my wish to take a look at Israel," replied Einstein. "But I'm afraid that if I went there now, they would look at me."

Gabriel Pascal, who arrived in New York last week, has a number of projects, including a G. B. Shaw play for Charles Boyer, who then would appear in its movie adaptation.

The Judge Shalleck-F. D. R., Jr., fight for the congressional seat of the late Representative Bloom will be climaxed with a series of rival broadcasts. Gov. Chester Bowles of Connecticut, Tallulah Bankhead and Robert E. Sherwood will broadcast for Roosevelt.

A member of Governor Dewey's inner cabinet is planning to resign shortly and now is reviewing offers.

Mike Romanoff berated a screen star who had borrowed some money from him and failed to return it on the promised date. "Remember," said Romanoff, "a hustler's sole asset is in keeping his word."

An unusual newspaper study is being made in New York and its results will appear in book form. It's being conducted by Joe Barnes, editor of the late New York Star; Blair Clark, who was its publisher; Richard Lauterbach and Kenneth Stewart, who wrote for the Star's predecessor, PM . . . These men are checking through all the back copies of the Star and PM and through all the files of both papers, to learn why the project failed . . . "I'm trying to find out," explained Barnes, "the license plate of the car that hit me."

A lady who bought a home owned by Mrs. Harrison Williams, the woman whose pride is in appearing on the annual list of best-dressed ladies, found an unusually large attic in the house. "That's where I stored all my dresses, after they were worn once," Mrs. Williams explained. The purchaser asked: "But why didn't you sell or give away those dresses?" Mrs. Williams said: "Oh, no. They'll all eventually go to a museum."

Nancy Oakes de Marigny is on her way to England, where she probably will take up permanent residence . . . Saratoga's opening racing day, August 1, will be designated as "Monty Woolley Day," in honor of Saratoga's foremost resident. He'll have a race named in his honor and a banquet sponsored by a committee which will include Cole Porter, Frank Sullivan and Jock Whitney.

1500 Eastern Alumni Hold Reunion

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

Nostalgia flowed, like a deep, glowing river through the halls of Eastern High School last night as 1500 alumni held their annual reunion.

But nowhere did memory lay so heavy and tactile in the air as in Classroom 119, where 29 gray-haired members of the class of 1899 sat once again behind school desks and brought themselves up to date on each other.

In their midst sat two persons who were listed on no program but were the center of attraction.

One was a wonderful vision of a little old lady who came to hardly anybody's shoulder, wearing a black straw hat and a lily-of-the-valley corsage. She was Miss May Johnson, 74 years old, 4701 Connecticut ave. nw., who taught Latin at Eastern for 40 years.

Taught Doctor Latin

The other was 81-year-old William Wallis, who taught mathematics.

After the dinner in the school cafeteria it was almost impossible to get near either as former students flooded up to shake their hands. Dr. George W. Calver, physician to Congress, made his way through to tell Miss Johnson:

"I want you to know I learned my medical Latin from you."

Miss Johnson, who retired in 1937 after teaching Latin to some 4000 students, told how she has taught Latin to so many people in Washington that she can pretty well surround herself, for a person's regular needs, with her own former students: both her doctor and dentist, for example, learned their Latin from her.

Mitscher's Teacher

And Mr. Wallis, math teacher—he stood recalling some of those he taught. Men like Admiral Marc Mitscher of the Pacific carriers, and Tony McAuliffe, who said "Nuts" to the Germans at Bastogne. Charles Lindbergh was another Eastern student.

The reunion last night was for all alumni, with a dinner, a musical program in the auditorium and a dance in the gymnasium. But especially it was for Class of 1899 celebrating its golden jubilee. They came from as far away as Greenfield, Mass.—that was Mrs. Mary Whepley Ballard, whose father was chairman of the Board of Education way back when it was called the Board of Trustees.

Two From Class of '93

But the alumni went back even further, two being from the class of 1893: Dr. Mary Holmes, 4634 Ellicott st. nw., and Mrs. Isabel Burns Horning, 1301 Missouri ave. nw.

In room 119 the students of 1899 stayed reminiscing, unwilling to give that up to hear "Pagliacci" and "Lady of Spain" in the auditorium down the hall.

They were having a wonderful time.

Chamber Hits Truman Plans

anced budget and steady reduction of the national debt.

On the other han, in the fields of foreign policy and national defense the stands of the chamber and of the Administration were harmonious.

Earlier yesterday the chamber received two gloomy pictures of the direction in which the Government is heading, from Democratic members of the Senate.

One luncheon meeting heard Senator Harry F. Byrd of Virginia denounce Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan's proposed new farm program. He said its adoption would be "the most horrible example" of how the Government could 'underwrite a producer - d i s t r i b u t o r - consumer Utopia."

A transportation group heard Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.), chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, declare that this country would right now be in economic distress if it wasn't for the "cold war" with Russia and the resulting huge expenditures.

Brannan, Byrd declared, "admits the cost of his own program cannot be estimated." But that proposal, Byrd said, is only an example of scores of Federal programs by which the Government is, or would be, committed to huge continuing expenditures.

"As I see it, fiscal year 1951, beginning July 1, 1950, will be critical in Federal affairs," Byrd asserted. "The p r o s p e c t s are bleak and fraught with grave public consequences.

"With this crisis virtually upon us, there are three courses open. The first is drastic reduction in public spending. The second is a substantial increase in taxes. The third is large-scale deficit financing."

Speaking to a third luncheon group, Fairfield Osborn, president of the New York Zoological Society and author of "Our Plundered Planet," declared that at the present rate of drain on t i m b e r resources, assuming no other changing factors, "we will not have a stick of saw timber left in this country in another 87 years."

Speaking for private timber owners, the Nations No. 1 lumberman, J. Philip Weyerhaeuser, jr., president of Weyerhaeuser Timber Co., recounted private forestry conservation measures now under way and said today's economy is for the first time "providing the economic incentive to grow trees as a crop."

Wants No Whip-Cracking

He said the lumber industry will make the necessary investments to grow new trees "if the business climate permits, but not via the 'crack-the-whip' method." Weyerhaeuser opposed additional employes for the Forest Service as provided in a bill before Congress.

Louis Bromfield, author and farmer, classified about 10 per cent of the nation's farmers as "top notch" while another 30 per cent he called "pretty good." The remaining 60 per cent produced little more than they consume, he said, but are the most desirous of Government subsidies and supports.

Ford said a crowded docket would prevent trial of the case here until July 5.

The charges grew out of an FBI investigation, followed by that of the grand jury, of ballot stuffing in the November presidential election. A total of 254 forged ballots were found in 11 Bourbon County precincts.

Official returns showed President Truman received 3562 votes in the county and Thomas Dewey, Republican candidate for President, 1610. Senator Virgil Chapman, Democrat, who lives in the county, received 3465 votes and John Sherman Cooper, Republican, 1757 votes.

'Boy Wonder' Was Aide To Frankfurter, Byrnes

Known alike for his caustic wit and his heavy tonnage, Edward F. Prichard was for six years one of the "wonder boys" of official Washington.

Prichard came to Washington, a 300-pound young man of 23, fresh from Princeton and Harvard Law School. He came originally as Supreme Court Justice Frankfurter's law secretary, but before long was beginning a succession of jobs important in the New Deal.

After serving as special assistant to Attorney Generals Jackson and Biddle and as special adviser to Sidney Hillman in the Office of Production Management and later in the War Production Board, he became special assistant to Economic Stabilizer James F. Byrnes. By the time he was 27 he was general counsel of the Office of Economic Stabilization under the present United States Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson.

It was while he was aide to Vinson that Prichard reported for Army service with the remark: "They've scraped the bottom of the manpower barrel and now they've taken the barrel." A month later he was back in Washington, discharged as overweight. Most of his Army career had been spent in a hospital at Fort Custer, Mich.

Prichard went to work again for Vinson in the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and later became general counsel of the Office of War Mobilization and Conversion. When Vinson entered the Cabinet as Treasury Secretary, Prichard went along as assistant to the Secretary.

Finally, in September, 1945, at 29, he announced he was returning to his home town of Paris, Ky., to enter the private practice of law. In February, 1947, he married Miss Lucy Marshall Elliott, of Woodford County, Ky., in a ceremony at Lexington, Ky., attended by many Washington notables.

After leaving for Kentucky, Prichard returned briefly to Washington early in 1946 to assist then Democratic National Chairman Robert E. Hannegan as general counsel to the Democratic National Committee. After returning to Paris the same year, he continued for a while to hold his party post.

Alexandria Will Rebuild 20 Streets at $400,000 Cost

A working schedule for rebuilding 20 Alexandria streets this year at a cost of more than $400,000 was approved last night by the Alexandria City Council.

City Manager Rogert S. Marshall jr., said the schedule represents about two-thirds of the street construction planned by the city for 1949.

He warned, however, that building of streets for new subdivisions may force changes in the schedule.

The work will be financed from the city's bond account, Marshall said. The work, he said, will be over and above maintenance work and specific construction projects set up in the 1949 operating budget.

The schedule lists eight streets which will be rebuilt of concrete and ten others which will be stabilized and blacktopped. Highest priorities were given to Glebe rd. and Quaker le. Problems of acquiring rights of way, however, may affect the work on both of these thoroughfares.

In other actions last night the Alexandria council:

1. Voted against joining with the Virginia League of Municipalities in an investigation of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co.'s request for a raise increase. The Virginia State Corporation Commission will conduct a hearing on the request June 13.

2. Authorized the city building inspector to over-extend his budget by $2000 and the city engineer to shuffle funds in his budget in order to fill jobs in the two departments that are going begging because of the low pay.

3. Met with the Charter Commission and suggested subjects for the commission to consider in the course of its task of overhauling the city charter. Some subjects suggested by council members were: non-partisan local elections, municipal civil service, election of the mayor separately from other council members and appointment of some city officials who are now elected.

Three Young Boys Hurt in Auto Accidents

Gregory S. Chaconas, 3, 1346 Montague st. nw., suffered a possible concussion and bruises to his head and body while playing in the roadway in front of 1353 Montague st. nw.

The boy was struck, according to police, by an auto operated by Roy V. Holmes, 57, of 1915 Nicholas st., Arlington. He was admitted to Children's Hospital.

Boy Hurt in Northeast

Bradley W. Hinckley, 4, of 4466 Lily Ponds dr. ne., was admitted to Casualty Hospital with a possible concussion and face bruises. Police said he ran between parked cars into the path of an auto driven by William R. Shelton, 37, of 5300 3rd ave. se. The accident occurred in front of 1421 Kenilworth ave. ne.

Roy T. O'Keefe, 3, suffered cuts, bruises and a possible skull fracture when he reportedly ran into the side of an automobile near his home. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. O'Keefe, 106 East Thornapple st., Chevy Chase.

He was taken to Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, by the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rescue Squad and transferred to Children's Hospital.

Motorcycle Overturns

Driver of the automobile was identified by Montgomery County Police as Mrs. Margaret Gibson, 35, of 2f4 Rosemary st., Chevy Chase.

In another accident Pfc. Robert Macomber, 20, of Bolling Air Force Base, suffered a fractured right leg and ribs when his motorcycle overturned near 15th and C sts. se. and struck the rear of a car owned by J. S. Benston, 322 Kentucky ave. se.

Macomber lost control of his motorcycle, police reported, shortly after pulling out of a filling station. He was taken to Casualty Hospital and later transferred to the Bolling hospital.

Ex-Alcoholics Tell Stories

Three former alcoholics last night described their experiences before and after they joined Alcoholics Anonymous at a public meeting of the Rockville chapter of the group in Richard Montgomery High School in Rockville.

Unnamed and unidentified in accordance with a rule of the organization, they vividly recalled the amazing changes that had come about in their lives.

One speaker said 75 per cent of alcoholics who admit they are drunks and are willing "to face the truth of their illness," are led back to normalcy by AA.

The Rev. Donald Bautz, executive director of the Lutheran Inner Mission Society, a guest speaker, described the theory of AA as that of attaining salvation by saving others.

About 100 persons attended the meeting, which was the first of its kind in Rockville.

Scheele Appoints 2 Psychiatrists To Advisory Unit

Appointment of two noted psychiatrists to the National Advisory Mental Health Council was announced yesterday by Surgeon General Leonard A. Scheele of U. S. Public Health Service.

They are Drs. Franz Alexander, director of the Chicago Institute for Psychoanalysis, and S. Bernard Wortis, chairman of the psychiatry department of New York University Medical College.

Both will start three-year terms on July 1, filling vacancies left by Drs. William C. Menninger and John Romano, whose terms expire.

Mrs. Meyer Scores Rivalry Of Protestants

Protestant churches yesterday were urged to eliminate their competitive zeal and work for unity and brotherly cooperation by Mrs. Eugene Meyer, wife of the chairman of the board of The Washington Post.

Mrs. Meyer spoke before the Women's Guild of the Westmoreland Congregational Church, Westmoreland circle nw. Members of the Women's Bible Class of Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church also attended the meeting.

Mrs. Meyer praised the Presbyterian and Congregational women for meeting together. "It's just what the Protestant churches need in order to cope with the serious social problems of the day," she said. Pointing out that she was brought up a Lutheran, she termed the gathering a "tri-partite meeting."

Congratulates on Merger

She congratulated the Congregational-Christian Church and the Evangelical and Reformed Church for their recent union, but added that she did not believe "that amalgamation is always essential to Protestant unity."

"What we need in the religious world is not unification but unity, the ability to work harmoniously with all other forms of religious worship and to look upon them with understanding, sympathy and respect," she declared.

Mrs. Meyer called upon Protestant churches to serve the whole community in which they find themselves, and emphasized the need for interdenominational cooperation for a comprehensive program for youth, for psychiatric guidance in the solution of family problems, and the improvement of religious education through teacher training schools.

Urges Greater Service

"The indomitable spirit once characteristic of our Protestant Churches can be revived," she maintained, "if they now undertake their common social duties to the community as a whole and carry them out loyally, efficiently and enthusiastically with no thought of advantage to their own congregations."

"If the Protestant Churches would institute so thorough a program of community and family services, they would not find it necessary to lean on the public schools to reach the children," Mrs. Meyer asserted.

"The released-time program for religious education which has thrown the churches into conflict with each other and with the community, will only weaken the churches still further. The very fact that the Protestant groups started this unfortunate invasion of our public schools, is a sign that they, themselves, were too ineffectual to meet the problems of religious education with their own resources," she declared.

Fears Released-Time Effect

"The longer they insist upon this feeble substitute for independent and resolute leadership, the worse will be the effect upon the public schools, the community and the churches themselves," Mrs. Meyer said.

In answer to attacks by some Protestant clergy on secularism, Mrs. Meyer stated that "it is curious that the clergy who are the bitterest enemies of the secular world are the least aware that the real danger to religion today is the growing secularization of the churches, in the most materialistic sense of the word."

She scored the "vulgar advertising of converts" now going on among some religious groups as a "shocking exhibition of insensitivity to what is the most sacred of spiritual experiences."

"The kind of conversion that is now needed," Mrs. Meyer said, "is one that would emerge slowly but surely as a by-product of the creation of honest human relationships of a high and lasting nature and devoted service to all who suffer from the world's neglect, cruelty and injustice," she declared.

Pennsylvania Mine Blaze Traps Four

Girardville, Pa., May 4 (AP).—Four miners are trapped 800 feet underground today in a burning anthracite mine. Rescuers pumped fresh air in hopes the entombed men are still alive.

The miners were trapped shortly before last midnight in the No. 5 colliery of the Gilberton Coal C., two miles from this eastern Pennsylvania hard coal community.

Not a sound or sign has come from them. Fire cut off the mine's communications system.

Rescue workers reached 500 feet but smoke forced them back.

Fire broke out while only the small night force of eight men was underground. Four miners, partially overcome by smoke and gas, reached the surface safely. But four were trapped.

Technicians Vote

WTOP Group Is Solid for Union Shop

Technicians and engineers of radio station WTOP have voted for a union shop, the National Labor Relations Board reported yesterday.

In the Tuesday election, 31 employes were eligible to vote, 25 voted, two votes were challenged and no votes were cast against the union shop.

The vote authorizes Radio Broadcast Technicians Local 1215, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, A.F.L., to enter into an agreement with WTOP management, requiring union membership as a condition of continued employment.

Bill to Raise Limit on Trucks Is One of Five Vetoed by Lane

Annapolis, Md., May 4—(AP)—Governor Lane vetoed five General Assembly acts today, including one which would have opened Maryland highways to 90,000-pound trucks.

The loaded-truck weight limit now is 67,500 pounds.

The Governor also rejected an act which would have measured the 1,000-foot minimum distance between a tavern and a church or school in Anne Arundel County by "the usual traveled way," instead of a straight line.

The same bill also would have increased Laurel race track's alcoholic beverage license fee from $750 to $1,200 a year and allowed minors to work in places where liquor is served in Anne Arundel.

Lane based his veto on the 1000-fot measurement. He said he saw "no need or justification for weakening the application of the long-standing and acepted regulation."

He vetoed other measures which would have:

1. Stripped liquor license boards of power to hear cases involving sales to minors if a court had acquitted the licensee or found he "was justified in believing that the minor was not under 21."

2. Created a separate board of barber examiners for Allegany and Garrett Counties, exempting them from the State-wide barber law.

3. Directed the Board of Public Works to pay a $30 monthly pension to A. Hallie Creighton of Dorchester County, former Tidewater Fisheries Department employe.

Classification Act Overhaul Bill Sets Salary Top of $16,000

Senate Civil Service leaders today will continue their debate on possible changes in the Administration's plan to overhaul the Classification Act — changes that would:

(1) Add a minimum of a flat $100 to the proposed salaries of each of the more than 800,000 Federal workers in the low and middle brackets;

(2) Expand the bill to revise the salary schedules of both legislative and judicial employes and to give them a modest pay boost in the process;

(3) Reshuffle the grades and salaries of the 500,000 postal employes which would give them higher starting salaries and an average pay raise of around $200 each, and,

(4) Give the Civil Service Commission the authority to "co-ordinate" the salaries of the 600,000 per diem workers in Government.

The Administration's proposal to revise classified salary rates seems certain to be changed materially by the Senate Postoffice & Civil Service Committee. Half a dozen committee members are at work on their own reclassification plan which is scheduled to be made public on Monday. On that same day a subcommittee headed by Senator Long (D., La.) will start open hearings on the several pay bills referred to the committee.

The Administration's classification plan is aimed primarily at placing jobs and salaries in their proper relationship. It isn't intended to be a pay raise bill. Also, the Administration has informed Congress that any general pay raise it feels is justified should be made within the proposed classified framework.

An average pay raise of $50 a year is provided classified employes in the Administration's plan, a range of $1.72 to about $6000 a year. The ceiling on classified salaries would be raised from $10,330 to $16,000. The bill takes for granted that Congress will approve the executive pay bill at a $16,000 minimum. Otherwise, the classified bill would be doomed, too.

A new General Services (GS) schedule of 19 grades would be substituted for the present CAF, clerical, administrative and fiscal, Professional (P) and Subprofessional (SP). The clerical-mechanical schedule would be abolished and the employes paid under it would have their salaries fixed by local wage boards. The CPC (crafts protective and custodial) would have a new schedule of its own of 10 grades with a salary range of from $1410 to $4900. The average pay boost for employes under it would be $60 a year.

Employes who have been at the top of their respective grades for at least three years would be eligible for a longevity increase—provided they are recommended for it by their agencies. No employe could be given more than three longevity raises which would be the equivalent of in-grade raises.

The Civil Service Commission would be given the authority to administer the classification bill but it could delegate most of its functions to the agencies, subject to Civil Service standards and review.

The Administration bill is similar to the reclassification measure introduced in the House several weeks ago by Chairman Murray of its Civil Service Committee.

Table Shows Pay Adjustments Provided in Bill

The following table shows how the salaries of more than 800,000 classified employes would be adjusted under the Administration bill:

Washington Gets Honor for Fire Prevention Work

Washington was designated an honor city yesterday in "year-round excellence in fire protection and prevention."

The award, one of 10 to cities with more than 500,000 population, was made by the National Fire Waste Council, an affiliate of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. It was presented by Earl O. Shreve, chamber president, to Frederick P. H. Siddons, president of the Board of Trade.

The award came from activity of the District's Fire Prevention Council, established last September by the Board of Trade's public order committee.

Child Agency Merger Plan Considered

Improved Welfare Service and Less Financial Worry Cited as Benefits

A far-reaching proposal to merge four District private child welfare agencies was in the wind yesterday.

The merger, which would serve the dual purpose of getting the agencies out of their present financial difficulties and of improving service to the community, may be the first in a series of consolidations of community agencies.

This possibility was brought out yesterday by a United Community Service official, who suggested that welfare agencies in other fields might equally profit by sharing their staff, facilities and planning.

May Be Forced to Close

The merger proposal was brought to the fore with announcement that the Children's Country Home, which cares for convalescent youngsters, will have to close its doors in September unless new funds—not now anticipated—become available, or the merger is accomplished.

Other agencies which would merge their operation under a single roof are the Washington Home for Foundlings, operating at half capacity for lack of funds; the Foster Day Care and Counseling Association and the Children's Protective Association.

Miss Elizabeth Van Wagner superintendent of the Children's Country Home, pointed out the institution which received $37,645 in 1947, was allowed only $30,705 for current operations. This cut was made necessary by failure of the last Community Chest campaign.

The institution now is operating at a $10,000 deficit, Miss Van Wagner said. The staff, cut twice in the past two years, cannot be further reduced, she warned.

Approved In Principle

The merger has been approved in principle by the agencies involved.

The crisis of these private agencies intensifies the problem of the District's overcrowded Industrial Home School Annex.

Public Welfare Director John W. Tramburg announced Tuesday that the annex will refuse to accept any more dependent and neglected children until the present population of 145 is reduced to 100. The annex was built for 90 children.

Where will applicants now go? Tramburg answered that all his staff could do was redouble efforts to locate relatives. Possibly babies could be sent to Gallinger Hospital, he said.

Shortage of foster homes in which to place annex residents, was one serious bottleneck, he said. "If we get any large number of applicants it will be a terrible dilemma," he said. "We're just hoping demand will taper off."

Meanwhile, Capt. Rhoda Milliken, head of the Police Women's Bureau, said: "I just don't know what I'll do now with children who need placement."

Evicted Mother, 2 Children

Yesterday she said she was confronted with a mother evicted with two children, aged 8 and 11. The mother was trying to place her own visiting mother with a friend, the children with another friend.

"Normally, we'd send the children to the Annex, if they weren't placed by 5 p. m.," the Captain said. "Now I don't know what to do if the mother can't locate them."

Captain Milliken pointed out the mother could only leave the children with a friend for one night. The friend lives in a housing project limiting the number of residents in each unit.

In the area of private welfare work, a Chest official yesterday pointed to health and settlement work as instances where agencies could work together more efficiently.

"For example" he said, "there are 10 settlement houses, each with its own budget, each with its own director."

Possible Economies

"Maybe it would be more efficient to have one director, one budget. Then too, several may employ part-time woodwork teachers. Maybe one carpenter could serve all."

While five planning divisions within the UCS bring together executives of similar agencies for discussion and planning, there is room for practical results, the official noted.

He also mentioned the health field "where there's an agency corresponding to just about every major ailment or part of the bod."

He cited diabetes, heart, cancer, blind, crippled, lung agencies. In three important endeavors these groups could work together instead of separately, the official said. He listed them as:

Health education—informing the individual about health problems; developing an adequate public health program, and providing adequate medical care for those who can't afford it.

Coordination is a necessity, the official said, in a community "constantly falling 20 to 25 per cent short of the minimum goal for voluntary services." He said the agencies themselves have recognized the problem "and themselves are leading the way to working together more effectively."

Warm Sun Coaxes Coeds to Bask on Campus

By Henry Rohland—The Washington Post

SUNKIST MARYLAND GIRLS—The warm sun of yesterday—balmiest day this spring—looked down on a Maryland University campus covered with basking Betty Coeds, who, in sun and swim suits, gave the place a beach club appearance. The temperature reached 88 and around town those who could and would were getting an early start on an even sun tan

Washington Encounters Heat of 88 Degrees, Plus Soon-Vanishing Air That Causes Gasps

The mercury rammed to its highest of the year yesterday, popolating the District's parks and hillsides and sending Washingtonians burrowing for last year's seersuckers.

At 3:40 p. m. the temperature reached its zenith for the day: 88, only 5 degrees off the record of 93 for May 4 set in 1928.

The fine, summery, merry-month-of-May day was odoriferously marred in the morning hours by a weather phenomenon known as "temperature inversion." In the plainer language of one forecaster, the air "stank."

The Weather Bureau, the District Building, police and newspaper offices received many calls from citizens wanting to know what it was in the air that was making their nostrils and eyes smart.

Smoke, smut and the city's gases were kept near the ground in the morning, a weatherman explained, because the air there was colder than above. This "stable atmosphere" meant that air wasn't rising to take away the city's usual and varied accumulation of aromas. The same condition occurred about a month ago here.

The smelly haze was gone by about 11 a. m. and those fortunate enough to be non-working could don bathing and sun suits and repair outside to start getting their sunburns.

Downtown many girls were in summer dresses. Business surged at soda fountains, and restaurants put iced tea on the menus.

The Washington Post
PATRICIA URBANUS, 21 months old, of 823 6th st. sw., found it a perfect day for a stroll in Lafayette Park.

To the District's sweating police, the heat of the day afforded a concession. All policemen, by order of Supt. Robert J. Barrett, were permitted to shed their coats and direct traffic and hand out tickets in shirt-sleeved comfort. The order extended to 8 p. m.

Thursday should be another fine sun-bathing day, and a shirt-sleeve one for policemen and civilians. The temperature, the weatherman said, should rocket again to a point near the 90s.

Two Parking Meter Officers Are Fired at Silver Spring

Two parking meter officers in Silver Spring who, citizens said, enforced parking regulations too rigidly, have been fired, it was revealed yesterday.

The officers, Norman Pyles of Rockville and Wells J. Skinner of Kensington, were discharged by County Manager I. G. McNayr, who admitted he was "not too happy about the men's work."

McNayr said his decision was also influenced by an outside auditor's report which stated that the system worked better in other localities where the job of handling collections was rotated frequently.

Commenting that "the old setup has been a headache for months," Police Chief Charles M. Orme said that from now on the duty would be rotated among regular members of the police force. He said Bethesda would soon have the same arrangement.

Pyles and Skinner were sworn in several months ago as deputy sheriffs to work the parking meters full time and both were paid from suburban tax funds. Neither was a member of the Montgomery County police force although they wore police uniforms.

A mild controversy has existed in the community for several weeks with citizens complaining the men "would pounce on us the second the violation sign appeared." Some merchants charged the meter officers were driving shoppers away.

Orme said that James M. White, 8704 Gilbert la., Takoma Park, and Seesman I. Franklin, 1523 E. Falkland la., Silver Spring, will be appointed to the county police force to make the new program possible.

Stork Racers . . .

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

MOTHER, DAUGHTER—AND DADDY—DOING NICELY—The Rev. Ernest Williams and Mrs. Williams, who lost a race with the stork, get better acquainted with their new daughter, Anne Cabell Williams, in Garfield Memorial Hospital yesterday. The minister, pastor of Trinity Episcopal Church, Arlington, Va., delivered the baby Monday night in the family auto during a rainstorm just after crossing 14th st. bridge en route to the hospital. Said the father, "it was no trouble at all"

Prince Georges Gaming Jury Indicts 2 More

Disclosure of further gambling indictments by the Prince Georges County, Md., grand jury came yesterday when officials announced arrest of two women, who were charged with operating a lottery.

They are Mrs. Sadie Stanton, proprietor of the 4310 46th ave., Bladensburg, headquarters of accused gambler William (Snags) Lewis, and Mrs. Theda Shepard, 3417 41st ave., Brentwood, Md.

Both women were in Lewis' headquarters, when the house was raided March 25 by United States marshals acting under the direction of U. S. Attorney George Morris Fay. Neither was among the 36 persons indicted by Fay's special District gambling grand jury.

Five other women were in the Lewis house when it was raided. The exact number of indictments returned Tuesday by the Prince George County grand jury is not yet known, although a total of 15, including Lewis, has already been announced.

The indictments were returned as the result of testimony given by two former FBI agents, acting as special investigators in Fay's campaign to curtail gambling. They are B. Downey Rice, and James Sharpe, both Washington lawyers.

Mrs. Stanton and Mrs. Shepard were released under $500 bond.

Rice said yesterday that the women were operating 17 adding machines when he and Sharpe led the marshals into Lewis' headquarters.

Lewis and 12 others were indicted both in Prince Georges County and in the District for setting up and promoting a numbers lottery. The lottery which Mrs. Stanton and Mrs. Shepard were charged with operating was not disclosed yesterday.

McCarran To Do All He Can to Bring Home Rule

Kefauver Writes All Senators About Bill; Nevadan First To Pledge Support

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) said yesterday he will do all he can to help win Senate approval for the Washington home-rule bill.

McCarran, former chairman of the Senate District Committee, pledged his support for the home-rule measure in a letter to Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) chairman of the District subcommittee that drafted the plan.

Senator Kefauver said he had sent a copy of the bill, and of the report explaining it, to each member of the Senate. His letter to the members invited their support for the home-rule bill, and declared "we hope the Senate will act upon it expeditiously, so that the bill if passed can be sent to the House for action early this session."

McCarran First to Reply

"It is of signal importance that home-rule legislation be promptly considered," Kefauver's letter said.

Kefauver said the question of when the Senate may take up the home-rule bill is still undecided, but he voiced confidence that the Senate will act on it this session.

Senator McCarran's reply was the first received, Kefauver said.

McCarran told Kefauver "as one who struggled long and earnestly with the problem of home rule for the District of Columbia, I want to compliment you upon having done a very fine job with this bill."

"I earnestly hope it can be passed promptly by the Senate, and that it will receive favorable consideration in the House.

Old Home-Rule Advocate

"For 15 years or so, I have been advocating self-government for the District; I have authorized or sponsored a number of bills to achieve this objective; and it will give me great pleasure to do everything I can to assist in securing Senate approval of the home-rule bill during the present session."

The home-rule bill would give Washington a city-council and city-manager government. The council would have 9 members elected by voters here, and two appointed by the President subject to Senate confirmation.

Most city agencies would be streamlined into 12 major departments under the manager, with schools as a separate department under an elected board of education.

Johnston Aims To Amend D.C. Sales Tax Bill

Senator Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.) said yesterday he is preparing to fight the District 2 per cent sales tax bill with a series of amendments.

District Committee Chairman J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) voiced hope the revenue bill, featuring the sales tax, may be brought up for Senate action Friday.

Johnston said the amendments will carry out the recommendations for substitute revenue-raising methods sponsored by a four-member District Committee minority.

These include proposals (1) for extending the District income tax with present exemptions and stiffer rates to persons here who now escape the levy (2) a 25-cent increase in the real estate tax rate of $2 per $100, and (3) a doubling of present liquor gallonage taxes.

Johnston is also expected to urge an amendment, not included in the minority program, to boost the present Federal contribution from 12 million dollars a year, to an annual appropriation equal to 25 per cent of the city budgets. In the year starting July 1, it would mean a Federal contribution of close to 26 million dollars.

The minority report on the revenue bill called for seven million dollars increase in the Federal payment. Johnston has long said he favored having the Federal Government pay at least one-fourth of the District's expenses.

Group Opposes Roosevelt School Plan

The Crestwood Citizens Association last night voted to oppose a proposal to make Roosevelt High School a Negro school. The proposal was made by the Federation of Civic Associations and Teachers' Union, Local No. 27.

The association met in Roosevelt High School at 13th and Upshur sts. nw.

Dr. James A. Gannon of the District School Board spoke on "Facts and Fallacies of Medicine."

Hershman Named Head Of MacArthur Citizens

Robert R. Hershman of 4651 Brewer pl. nw., was elected president of the MacArthur Boulevard Citizens Association at its meeting at the Palisades Field House, Dana and Sherrier pls. nw., Tuesday.

Other officers elected were: vice president, William D. Calder; recording secretary, Mrs. E. M. Fornili; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Lewis H. Ulman; and treasurer, Frank G. Urban.

Delegates named to the Federation of Citizens Associations were, H. E. Van Gelder and E. M. Fornili, and new delegates to the Northwest Council are, Elmer Batzell and Gordon Atherholt.

Marinshaw Heads Highlands Citizens

F. A. Marinshaw, an insurance man of 73 Darrington st. sw., was elected president of the Washington Highlands Citizens Association last night in a meeting at Bald Eagle Recreation Center, Nichols ave. and Joliet st. sw.

H. A. Nessen was named first vice president, Elmer Hallowell second vice president, Mrs. A. K. Ramsey recording secretary, C. W. Price corresponding secretary, M. P. Warren treasurer, William Hudgens and retiring president Joseph V. Moran delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

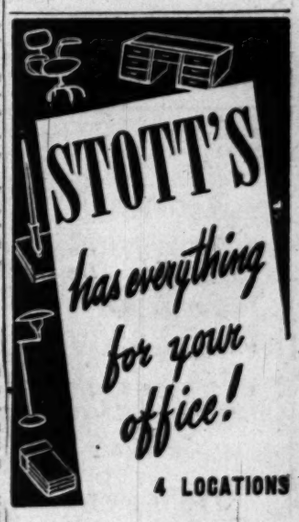
Doctors Elect Ballinger as 1950 Chief

The District Medical Society last night named Dr. William M. Ballinger its president-elect, to take office as president in July, 1950.

Current president is Dr. John Minor, and the current president-elect, who will take office this July, is Dr. Walter Freeman, neurosurgeon and developer of transorbital lobotomy brain operations. Dr. Freeman was elected a year ago.

The new president-elect, Dr. Ballinger, has offices at 1801 I st. nw., and lives at 4923 Hillbrook ln. nw. He is a specialist in gastroenterology and a member of the staffs of Doctors and George Washington Hospitals. He also is an associate professor of gastroenterology at Georgetown University Medical School.

Other officers elected last night were Dr. Samuel M. Dodek, first vice president; Dr. Dorothy S. Jaeger-Lee, second vice president; Dr. Minor, member of the executive board for a four-year term; Dr. Richard V. Mattingly, member of the board of censors for a four-year term; Dr. Hugh H. Hussey, delegate to the American Medical Association, and Dr. Frederick C. Fishback, alternate.



Area News in Brief

Boy Fugitive Tells Of His Crime Wave

A 15-year-old fugitive from the Industrial Home School at Blue Plains, D. C., was energetic in his bike-stealing efforts.

He stole five since March 1.

Then he turned to truck theft, made off with one. He also looted an auto.

Yesterday, however, police brought his one-man juvenile crime wave to a halt. Five charges of petty larceny were lodged against him—the bicycles; another charge for theft of the truck; still another for striking a taxi with it and failing to stop; yet another for larceny from an auto; and finally, a charge for being a fugitive.

Ironically, the boy was picked up by a Fourth Precinct scout car, police said, for stealing three bags of rags. Once apprehended, they reported, he confessed all, and led officers to four of the bicycles. The fifth bike, he declared, had been stolen from him "by some dirty crook."

Police turned him over to the Receiving Home pending Juvenile Court action. The four bicycles have been returned to their rightful owners, as was the truck, stolen from the Valley Forge Distributing Co., 1515 S. Capitol st.

For Threatening Officer

William W. Huntsberger, 32, of 1765 Q st. nw., was convicted yesterday in Municipal Court of threatening a policeman.

When Third Precinct Pvt. Thomas B. Basnight went to Huntsberger's home to investigate the firing of a gun, Huntsberger stuck a loaded automatic pistol in Basnight's abdomen, the court was told.

Sentencing was deferred until May 10.

Youth's Foot Mangled

The left foot of an 18-year-old youth was badly mangled yesterday when he tried to hop a freight train in Alexandria's Potomac Yards for a ride to Baltimore.

The youth, Earl Erwin, of Columbia, Pa., was freed from between two cars by railroad men who had to uncouple two cars to get his foot loose.

Safe Recovered

A safe stolen April 15 from Fitzgerald Funeral Home, 3245 Wilson blvd., Arlington, has been recovered, Arlington police reported yesterday. Cash in the safe, totaling $350, however, was missing.

The safe was found Tuesday night by two Virginia highway department workers just off Old Dominion dr., a half mile south of the Fairfax County entrance to Great Falls Park, police said.

Crouch Heads Drive

George A. Crouch, general zone manager for Warner Brothers theaters in Washington, has been appointed to the advisory committee for the District of Columbia Savings Bond Division, Chairman Thomas J. Groom announced yesterday. The Savings Bonds "Opportunity Drive" will be held May 16 to June 20.

Junior Red Cross Plans Pan American Fiesta

The second annual Friendship Fiesta of the Junior Red Cross will be held from 4 to 6 p. m. Friday in the Aztec Gardens of the Pan American Union.

This Is the Way We Brush Our Teeth . . .

By Charles DelVecchio—The Washington Post

DENTAL CARE DEMONSTRATION—Shiny teeth and the way to keep them that way are shown by (from left) Mary Alice Kilpatrick, 12, of 204 F st. nw.; Hazel Wilson, 15, of 513 Third st. nw., and Lucy Judy, 13, of 913 I st. nw., Jefferson Junior High School students. Proper dental-care methods were explained at the school yesterday by hygienists of the District Dental Society and the dental service of the District Health Department

Chappelear Services Set For Saturday

Hughesville, Md., May 4 (AP).—Dr. Frederick D. Chappelear, former president of the Medical and Chirurgical Faculty of Maryland, died today at his home here.

He had been regarded as the dean of the medical profession in southern Maryland.

A gradaute of the University of Maryland medical school, he served in the Navy from 1905 to 1907, practiced in Lewes and Rehoboth, Del., from 1907 to 1913, then moved to Charles County, where he continued his practice until just before his death. He helped organize the hospital at La Plata.

Dr. Chappelear's term as president of the Medical and Chirurgical Faculty was in 1936. Funeral services tentatively have been arranged for Saturday morning in Bryantown, Charles County.

Injuries Fatal To Hoist Engineer

John Steger, a 56-year-old Hyattsville, Md., hoisting engineer, died yesterday at Casualty Hospital of injuries received April 1 when a hoist fell on him.

The accident occurred while Steger was on a job at 7th and Edgewood st. ne. for the Spidel and Hall Construction Co., 1427 I st. nw.

Rifle Kills Soldier On Firing Range

Authorities of the Washington Military District last night were probing the fatal wounding of a Washington soldier with his own service rifle early yesterday on a Fort Meade firing range.

The dead soldier was Pvt. Fred Beuchert, jr., 29, attached here to F Co. of the Third Infantry Regiment at Fort Lesley J. McNair. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Beuchert, live at 712 Somerset pl. nw.

The Army said Beuchert went to the range yesterday morning with a detachment from his company, but further details were lacking.

Beuchert was pronounced dead of a gunshot wound in the head on arrival at the Ft. Meade Hospital. A note addressed to Beuchert's wife was found in his uniform pocket, but its contents were not divulged.

The Army listed the wife's address as 764 Rock Creek Church rd. nw. Neighbors there said the family moved about three weeks ago to Greenbelt, Md.

Army records showed Beuchert entered the Army in 1943, was discharged in 1945 after serving 20 months overseas, and reenlisted last April, with assignment to Fort McNair.

Besides his wife and his parents, he is survived by two sons, Daniel Gorton and Fred, 3d, and a brother, Robert.

Pvt. John L. Sikken

Reburial services for Pvt. John Lloyd Sikken, USMC, killed in action July 20, 1943, in the New Georgia Islands, will be held at 11 a.m. today in Arlington Cemetery.

Pvt. Sikken

Pvt. Sikken, who was the son of Mrs. Marion Brett Sikken, 2601 16th st. nw., was born in Hyattsville, Md.

He was graduated in 1933 from Central High School in Washington.

A dramatics student, he acted in plays here with the Community Center Players, and did dramatic work off and on after graduation for groups in New York City.

In 1939 he moved to Shepherdstown, W. Va., where he operated a woodcarving business until he entered the Marine Corps after Pearl Harbor. He had been serving with the Fourth Marine Raiders for less than a year at the time of his death.

Besides his mother, he leaves a sister, Mrs. Charlotte Elizabeth Ford of Tampa, Fla., and a cousin, Mrs. Hazel F. Neill, 2829 27th st. ne.

Sir Malcolm Fraser

Dorset, England, May 4 (AP).—Sir Malcolm Fraser, 71, Lord Lieutenant of Surrey, died tonight. He was formerly editor of the London Evening Standard and editor in chief of the Birmingham Gazette and Evening Dispatch. He served as vice chairman of the Conservative Party in 1937-38.

Mrs. Kappler, D. C. Native, Dead at 60

Mrs. Katharine Shuey Kappler, 60, widow of Charles J. Kappler and a member of the board of the Epiphany Home here, died yesterday at her home, 3202 Klingle rd. nw.

A native Washingtonian, Mrs. Kappler also was active in the Washington Club and the Captain Molly Pitcher Chapter of the DAR. She was a member of the Epipnany Church at 1317 G st. nw.

A graduate of Mary Baldwin School in Staunton, Va., Mrs. Kappler attended finishing schools in France and Germany, then came back to this city, where she was married in 1914. Mr. Kappler, an authority on Indian laws and treaties, was a lawyer here until his death in 1946.

Mrs. Kappler leaves two children, Charles T. Kappler, of the Klingle road address; and Mrs. James E. Palmer, of Merrifield, Fairfax County, Va. Four grandchildren also survive.

Services will be held at 11 a. m. Friday at Epiphany Church, by the Rev. Leland Stark, with burial in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Annie Loria

Mrs. Annie Loria, 75, of 10163 Sutherland rd., Silver Spring, Md., a resident of Washington and vicinity for 40 years, died yesterday after a long illness.

Born in Sicily, Italy, she came to this country on her honeymoon with her late husband, Anthony Loria, who died 14 years ago. Prior to living in Washington, she had lived for many years in East Hampton, Long Island, N. Y. She was active in Catholic Church work.

She is survived by seven children, Mrs. Mario Scandiffio of the Sutherland rd. address, Mrs. Benjamin R. Stickney, jr., 10008 Rogart rd., Silver Spring, Md. Mrs. I. G. Jackson, 1906 August rd., Silver Spring, Mrs. Francis Gaylor, 1908 Locust Grove rd., Silver Spring, Mrs. Alex McGuire, Greenbelt, Md., Mrs. Angelo Di Benedetto, Arlington, Va., and Phillip Loria, 10119 W. Va. ave. ne., also two brothers, Frank Cangiolosi of Houston, Texas and Joseph Cangiolosi, East Hampton, Long Island.

A requiem mass will be said Friday at 9 a. m. at St. John's Church, Forest Glenn, Md. Burial will be in St. Marys cemetery in Washington.

T/5 Raymond V. Clark

Reburial services for T/5 Raymond V. Clark, who died of malaria in a Japanese prison camp after being captured at the fall of Bataan, will be held today at 2 p. m. at Arlington Cemetery.

T/5 Clark

T/5 Clark, who was born here March 3, 1916, enlisted in the Army in 1938 at Fort Myer, where he participated in several exhibition riding drills with the Third Cavalry. He was transferred to the Philippines in 1941 shortly after reenlisting.

His mother, Mrs. Mary E. Clark, lives at 2525 Minnesota ave. se.

Mrs. Jennie W. Hopkins

Mrs. Jennie Wheatley Hopkins, 84, member of an old Alexandria family, died yesterday in the Washington Sanitarium and Hospital after several months illness.

She was the widow of George D. Hopkins, an Alexandria businessman, and the daughter of Benjamin and Martha Wheatley, also of Alexandria.

A member of the Political Study Club until her recent illness, Mrs. Hopkins is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Julia Benton Hopkins, a Washington lawyer, and a son, B. Marion Hopkins, of Alexandria.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. Saturday at the S. H. Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be in Riverview Cemetery.

F. C. Stahlman, Newspaper Official, Dies

He had been vice president of the Banner for more than 25 years. He and his nephew, Publisher James G. Stahlman, purchased the newspaper property from the Stahlman estate in 1937.

Virginian Receives Degree in District

For the first time in the history of Masonry in Virginia and the District, a Virginian yesterday received his Master Mason degree in a District lodge.

Special dispensations were obtained from the grand masters of the two jurisdictions to permit Meridian Lodge of Masons of Richmond to give the third degree to a candidate in King Solomon Lodge No. 31, F.A.A.M.

Geico Founds Life Insurance Company Here

By S. Oliver Goodman

Establishment of a new life insurance company with initial capital of $200,000 and surplus of $100,000 was announced yesterday by Government Employes Insurance Co. (Geico), Washington auto casualty firm.

Goodwin explained that the new company will issue 200,000 shares of $1 par common stock. After registration with the Securities and Exchange Commision, 150,000 shares will be offered to Geico stockholders at $1.50 a share. The ratio will be 1.2 shares of the new company's stock for each share of Geico held as of May 16.

The new company, Goodwin added, will provide complete life insurance service on a Nation-wide basis to Government employes and their dependents. Like Geico, the life insurance firm will have no agents and no branch offices.

Other officers elected at yesterday's session include: Leo Goodwin, jr., vice president; David L. Kreeger, vice president and general counsel; Gordon M. Dopp, vice president; Jerome A. Newman, treasurer; Warren Nigh, secretary; A. E. Kraus, assistant vice president; Leonard L. Lightcap, assistant secretary; A. K. Hatfield, assistant treasurer, and Francis M. Shea, special counsel.

Benjamin Graham, board chairman of the Graham-Newman Corp., was elected chairman of the executive committee of the new firm. Other directors are Daniel J. Callahan, jr., Leo Goodwin, jr., William K. Jacobs, jr. Elisha R. Jones, David L. Kreeger, Robert J. Marony, Jerome A. Newman and Francis M. Shea.

As "a company in course of organization," Government Employes Life Insurance Co. has been granted a permit by the District Superintendent of Insurance.

BIDS INVITED: Potomac Electric Power Co. yesterday invited bids for its new 10-million-dollar issue of first mortgage bonds to be opened on May 9. At least eight underwriting groups already have indicated intentions to bid. Subscription price for Pepco's additional comman stock issue also is expected to be fixed on May 9.

ODD LOTS: Strong retail demand was reported yesterday for Triborough Bridge and Tunnel Authority's offering of $141,500,000 in revenue bonds, the largest tax-exempt bond issue in American history. The issue is marketed by a syndicate of 423 firms headed by Dillon, Read & Co., Inc. . . . A group of 200 underwriters headed by Blyth & Co. offered 1,500,000 shares of Pacific Gas & Electric Co. first preferred stock at $26.75 a share . . . The American Bankers Association urged the Federal Reserve Board to eliminate ALL controls over installment credit . . . Printers Ink reported that March volume of national advertising reached an all-time high, with newspapers showing a spurt of 35 per cent over a year ago . . . Dun & Bradstreet wholesale food index this week rose to $5.71 from $5.67 a week ago, but was still 17 per cent below the year-ago figure of $6.88.

NEW DIRECTOR: Fritz R. Sauber, auditor, was elected a director of the Washington Permanent Building Association at the annual shareholders meeting yesterday. All other directors were re-elected and they in turn re-elected Carl J. Bergmann as president as well as the entire official staff. Bergmann reported resources now approximate 16 million dollars, while surplus and reserves amount to $1,533,000.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Robert H. Ames, formerly with Kiplinger Magazine, has joined the sales and copy staff of the Washington advertising agency of Lewis Edwin Ryan . . . John D. Marsh of Washington is a candidate for the board of trustees of the National Association of Life Underwriters, to succeed H. Cochran Fisher . . . A. J. Bates, general manager of the Christian Heurich Brewing Co. of Washington has been re-elected treasurer and a director of the United States Brewing Foundation . . . L. W. Graaskamp has been elevated to vice president in charge of sales of American Can Co.

NOMINEES: Unopposed nominees to head the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association are William J. McCausland, president; Charles P. Rice, first vice president, and Chester R. Shaw Resigns As Member of Sanitary Unit

The disclosure was made by the Montgomery Democratic State Central Committee. The committee said it had written Governor Lane urging him to appoint Trial Magistrate Warren Browning, of Bethesda Police Court, to fill Shaw's unexpired term until May 1, 1951.

Sworn In as Magistrate

Browning was sworn in Monday for another two-year term as magistrate but said he would accept the post if it were offered.

Shaw later confirmed his resignation, not yet accepted by the Governor, and observed: "I am 62 years old and I have been a public servant for 28 years; I want more leisure time."

Chairman J. Bond Smith, of the State Central Committee, reported his committee had forwarded to the Governor recommendations for filling two vacancies on the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Gingery Recommended

The six-year terms of Commissioners Richard F. Green and Clarence C. Keiser expired on May 1. Smith said the committee had recommended that Green, a Democrat, be appointed to succeed himself and that Donald E. Gingery, a Democrat and Bethesda builder, be named to succeed Keiser, who is a Republican.

The committee urged that if Trial Magistrate Browning, a Washington and Bethesda attorney, is appointed to the Shaw job, his Bethesda Police Court post should go to James R. Miller, a Rockville attorney and former Maryland State Police lieutenant.

Fairfax Board Approves Fire Control Setup

The Fairfax County Board of Supervisors yesterday agreed to put a paid fireman in each of the county's 11 volunteer departments, and to set up a central fire control system.

Both actions, approved during the board's meeting at Fairfax Courthouse, were proposed by Supervisor C. B. Runyon, a member of the county fire commission.

The 11 firemen, who would receive $75 monthly each from the county, will be assigned to departments at Fairfax, Herndon, McLean, Mount Vernon, Penn Daw, Dunn Loring, Vienna, Franconia, Annandale, Baileys Crossroads and Forrestville.

The central alarm setup will replace the present system of reporting blazes to county police or to one of the firehouses.

Fire control headquarters will receive all fire calls and dispatch the nearest company to the scene. Cost and location of the headquarters were not discussed.

Both moves have been indorsed by the Fairfax County Firemen's Asosciation.

A proposal by Dr. H. C. Bradford, county health officer, for an ordinance with teeth in it to enforce proper installation of septic tanks was deferred. C. W. Weston, State supervisor of sanitation for the northern Virginia area, boaked Brodford's stand.

He said that during and since the war, large realty developments in Fairfax installed septic tanks improperly. Bradford and Weston want the county health officer authorized to require proper installation before construction is approved.

Hospital Council To Meet Monday On New Secretary

The executive committee of the Hospital Council of the National Capital Area will meet Monday to select a successor to Robert P. Bryant, executive secretary, who resigned May 3.

Walter N. Tobriner, lawyer and council president, announced the special meeting yesterday. Despite reports that John D. Martin, recently-appointed assistant administrator at Columbia Hospital, has been chosen, the council president said NO formal action has been taken.

Bryant, former assistant administrator of the University Club here, served as the council's executive secretary throughout its organizational status. He left Tuesday to become administrator of the University Club, in Albany, N. Y.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

CHICAGO, MAY 4.—Not since Rogers Hornsby was speaking out fearlessly and making himself unbeloved by the baseball brass has the American League had a managerial character the likes of Jack Onslow. This is the third straight day in which Onslow has been a topic in this space, I have to admit.

But the new manager of the White Sox is an old spade-caller and wonderfully quotable. Today, for instance, he was saying without any off-the-record warning that, "those sign-thieves in Cleveland have been getting away with murder."

POVICH

It was a flat accusation that the Cleveland club was stealing the pitching signs from the White Sox catchers. "I have four players off last year's Cleveland club on my squad and they all tell me the Indians were stealing the signs last season," said Onslow.

It wasn't a new charge against the Indians, but Onslow was the first to voice it. Last year, Joe Kuhel had Coach Rick Ferrell watching for activity with binoculars in the centerfield bleachers, after suspecting that Cleveland hitters were getting the signs flashed to them from that sector.

KUHEL COULD turn up no evidence against the Indians but Onslow comes up with the emphatic declaration that it was happening, according to his four former Indians. "Somebody picked up our signs with binoculars and flashed back to the hitters, I'm positive," said Onslow, "and I'll tell you why.

"We were playing a game there on April 27, and the score was tied 3-3 in the sixth, with two out and the bases full. Hegan was up and there were two balls against him, no strikes. It looked as if he had to take the next pitch, and Gettel threw him a curve ball low and away. That's the way to pitch Hegan—curve him—but he must have been tipped off because he doubled and drove in three runs that beat us."

"If the Indians won the pennant that way last year, I'm glad to hear it. We can always find a way of mixing 'em up. We'll change our signs every inning if necessary, and cross 'em up. They'll be wasting their time with that kind of nonsense from now on."

SIGN STEALING has never been considered any sin in baseball, however. In fact, there has been pride-taking by certain coaches on their ability to thieve the signs of the catcher as he squats and manipulates his fingers—one for fast ball, two for curve. Del Baker, when he was third base coach of the Tigers, rated as the top sign thief and was esteemed for it.

Hank Greenberg confessed that he welcomed the tip-offs that Baker used to flash to him, and credited many of his home runs to that strategy. But even Greenberg was compelled to ask Baker to desist one day, in an exhibition game in Florida. The Tigers were playing the Nats, with Joe Krakauskas pitching.

From third base, Baker flashed the tip that Kraky was going to curve Greenberg. Hank waited for the ball to break, and it didn't. The wild pitch almost sheared his head off, as he ducked. Twice it happened that way, until Greenberg gratefully took a third strike and then berated Baker with, "Stop trying to call this guy's pitches. He doesn't know where they're going himself, so how can you possibly tell."

THE DANGER in sign-stealing, of course, is that the man at the plate can be badly hurt if the pitcher is crossing him up. Bob Feller was nettled by sign-stealers a few years back, and got mad about it, but he wasn't alarmed." "Let 'em keep it up," he said, "And if they're looking for a curve and take a fast ball on the chin it's their own fault."

When he was managing the White Sox early in his career, Clark Griffith was convinced that the old New York Yankees were tipping signs off to their players. Griffith suspected it when he saw the cross-bar on a letter "H" in one of the signboards being removed with a Yankee up to bat, and replaced on the succeeding pitch.

"We sent a fast man out there behind the fence to see what was going on," related Griff. "We didn't catch anybody, but there was a scaffolding built up behind the fence and when our man got there, he found a half-finished sandwich and a half-drunk bottle of beer left by somebody making a quick exit."

Gives 'Em Head Start

Bluege Lauds Fine Tutoring Of Boys in Johnson School

The Walter Johnson Memorial Baseball School got a hearty pat on the back yesterday from Ossie Bluege, director of the Nats' farm system.

"By starting the kids playing when they're young and by giving them good equipment and excellent instructors, the school is inspiring confidence in the future of baseball . . . and making my job easier," said Bluege, whose job is developing talent for the Nats.

Ossie was commenting about how the war had slowed down the development of major league talent. And how the comparatively recent advent of golf and tennis as kids' sports had interfered in ballplayer production.

"When I was a youngster in Chicago, we boys thought only of playing baseball, and we played it all year 'round," Bluege was saying.

"By the time I was 17, I was playing with the top semipro clubs around town, and experience had taught me which base to throw to. By learning the hard way, with hardly any instruction, I was playing Class B ball when I was 19, and was the Nats' third baseman when I was 21.

"If a player gets up to the majors at that age nowadays, he's practically a baby. Most of the rookies are 24 or 25 years old, which isn't too bad.

"But as I was saying, the Johnson school, which is three years old now, is making my job easier. When I was managing the Nats, I was glad to actively help out in the coaching of the Johnson school classes.

"What's that? You say that the two remaining class dates are this Saturday morning and May 14? Well don't be surprised if I pop in at a couple of the sessions," Bluege concluded.

Trucks Halts Red Sox on 3 Hits for Tigers, 5-1

Detroit, May 4 (AP).—Righthander Virgil Trucks of the Detroit Tigers held the hard-hitting Boston Red Sox to three hits as he beat them 5-1 today for his fourth straight triumph of the season.

Trucks faced only 32 batters over the nine-inning route, and only Ted Williams, Bosox leftfielder gave him much trouble. Williams slammed his fourth homer of the season in the seventh inning and hit a single in the ninth.

Yanks Club Browns, 10-5

St. Louis, May 4 (AP).—Phil Rizzuto and Gerry Coleman led a 15-hit Yankee attack today as New York swept a two-game series from the St. Louis Browns, 10-5, for Vic Raschi's fourth straight victory.

Rizzuto drove in four runs with a homer, his second in two days, and two singles. Coleman contributed a triple and two singles and Hank Bauer added a triple and single. Everybody in the Yank lineup hit safely except Yogi Berra.

Jack Graham, the Browns' first base rookie, hit his fifth homer with Gerry Priddy on base in the first inning and Eddie Pellagrini homered in the seventh with nobody on base.

Leo Durocher, manager of the New York Giants, waves in acknowledgment to greetings of fans as he leaves clubhouse in Polo Grounds yesterday. He returned to action after reinstatement by Baseball Commissioner Chandler.

Durocher's Perfect Day Marred by Boysen Summons

New York, May 4.—The New York Giants and their followers teamed up today to make this one of the happiest days of Manager Leo Durocher's turbulent career.

Returning to the Giants' helm following a five-day suspension imposed upon him by Commissioner A. B. Chandler, the loud leader was almost left speechless by the rousing reception given him by the 9874 fans, who continued to cheer him as he made the long walk from the clubhouse to the dugout.

Marring Durocher's otherwise perfect day, was the serving of a summons on him. The summons on behalf of Fred Boysen, the fan who alleges he was struck by Durocher after last Saturday's game, was served on the manager just before he left the clubhouse. The summons is returnable next Monday

The Giants wasted little time in showing Leo how they felt about his return. The first two men to bat in the first inning hit safely to put the Giants ahead 1-0.

Thereafter they scored in every inning but the fourth, sixth and eighth, piling up a dozen hits

Campanella Paces Bums

Brooklyn, May 4 (AP).—Roy Campanella, Brooklyn's husky catcher, banged out two hits today to run his consecutive hitting streak through 10 game while leading the Dodgers to a 5-1 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

The 27-year old New York Negro, who leads the National League in batting, upped his mark to .469 with a single and rouble. He figured in Brooklyn's two spurts with a stolen base, run batted in, and two ruins scored in addition to his two safeties.

Palmer's 277 Wins Carolinas

Southern Pines, N. C., May 4—(AP)—Hot as the 90-degree temperature, Johnny Palmer of Badin racked up a pair of 69s today to win the Carolinas open golf tournament with a 277 total, four strokes better than runner-up Bobby Locke. Victory in the $1,600 event was worth $300 to the circuit star.

Locke had a morning 70 and matched Palmer's closing 69 for a 281 to nose out Dick Chapman by a single stroke. Chapman had 282 and third place. Locke's effort was good for $225.

5 Kentucky Stars Become Player-Owners in NBL

Indianapolis, May 4 (AP).—Five University of Kentucky basketball stars are going into business for themselves as the new Indianapolis team of the National Basketball League, the NBL announced tonight.

The owner-players in the new venture are Wallace Jones of Harlan Ky., Cliff Barker of Yorktown, Ind., Ralph Beard of Louisville and Alex Groza of Martin's Ferry, Ohio, all members of the 1949 Kentucky team, and Joe Holland of Benton, Ky., who played on the 1948 squad.

Jones and Barker were drafted by the Washington Caps.

The Kentucky team was rated first in the Nation last season

Leo Ferris, NBL vice president, said the five players would own a major share of the franchise at the start and would be the full owners in three years.

Kentucky won the NCAA championship the last two years, and Groza was voted the outstanding player in the tournament. Groza, Beard and Jones were named on numerous All-America teams.

The team hopes to play at the Butler University Fieldhouse, which has been the home of the Indianapolis Jets of the Basketball Association of America.

Ferris said the NBL, which had nine teams last year, hopes to operate as a ten-team league next year.

He said the franchise of the Dayton Rens would not be renewed, however. The former New York Rens replaced Detroit after the season was well started last year and finished the season playing out of Dayton, Ohio.

Ferris said he was going to an Eastern city at once to discuss putting a tenth team there. He declined to name the city.

Those Wondrous Nats

WHATTA team, folks! What a team!

Those three home runs yesterday kinda prove that we're no fly-by-night power team. We've hit three or more homers on each of our last three playing dates, and theren't not letup in sight.

That gives us a clean sweep over the White Sox in this series, and puts us a mere 3½ games out of the first division.

You can have the Yankees, Indians, Red Sox, and all the rest. Give me our terrific Nats, the grittiest, fighingest team in the majors.

We've won five games now, and four of 'em were decided in the last inning . . . yesterday with two outs.

By the way, who said at the beginning of the season that we lack reserves? I guess he's eating his words now.

When Buddy Lewis and Al Kozar ran into tough luck at bat, we put in Eddie Stewart and Sherry Robertson, and they've only been tearing the cover off the ball.

And when Eddie Yost strained his back the other day, we put in Mark Christman. All he's done is three homers since then, and yesterday he broke up the game with a homer.

Christman's 2-Run Clout Makes it 8-7 Over Chisox

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Chicago, May 4.—The Nats' new hobby, hitting home runs paid off handsomely again today when they unloaded three of the species against the White Sox in the late innings and won an 8-7 ball game.

For eight innings, they were in virtual disgrace, having hit only one home run in contrast to their display of seven circuit wallops the day before, but they still had a couple tucked away in their bats in the ninth.

Mark Christman finally hit one, and it was final. It wiped out the last traces of what had been an enormous 7-0 lead of the White Sox, and put the Nats in front to stay.

The 35-year-old Christman, part-time third baseman, with only a very recent background as a home run hitter, timed his decisive blow perfectly, and with a high sense of the dramatic.

The Nats were in foul shape at that moment in the ninth, with two out, the White Sox a run in front, and Ed Robinson on base. In that same situation yesterday, Christman had hit a homer. He was equal to it again today. Off a pitch by Rookie Ernie Groth, he crashed a line drive over the newly-installed fence in left field for two big runs.

Hudson Rapped

The Nats din't swing into action until they were trailing 7-0, following a merciless Chicago assault on Sid Hudson who gave up all seven runs in the fourth inning. The White Sox had all the home run honors to that point, Cass Michaels banging one with two on, and Floyd Baker rapping another with one on.

The Nats staged a four-run seventh inning against Chico Pieretti with Sherry Robertson hitting a 3-run homer, and in the eighth got another run back to cut the Sox lead to 7-5. And then started after the tying runs in the ninth.

Ed Stewart got 'em one, quickly, with a home run shot into the right field lower deck that was legitimate in contrast to the previous three synthetic homers "on the house" beyond the shortened barriers.

But the Nats were rapidly falling short, with Groth disposing of Sherry Robertson on a ground ball and Clyde Vollmer on a pop fly for two outs. His next mistake was to hit Robinson with a pitched ball, a development that brought Muscles Christman up. Christman hit a -and-1 pitch for his third homer in three games, matching his home run output of the previous three seasons.

Sox Homer, Too

Former Nat Pieretti had the Nats shut out, without an extra base hit for six innings, and the White Sox were fondly regarding their nice seven-run lead obtained against Hudson in the fourth.

That inning was the only one of the first seven in which the Sox could hit safely, but they made the most of it. Hudson was rapped for four

Favorite Gigolo Is Second

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Havre de Grace, Md., May 4.—Palatine Stable's Quiz Show had the right answer here today. The son of Apache overcame trouble to win the $7,500 added Eastern Shore Stakes, closing feature witnessed by some 6,000 fans.

Responding to Jockey Johnny Gilbert's urging in the stretch, Quiz Show hung a length defeat on Sam Moretti's Gigolo, winner of his two previous outings and the favorite in the field of four.

Winner Pays $5.40

With Gigolo backed down to 7 to 10, Quiz Show, a big, good-looking colt, returned a $5.40 mutuel. The track, slightly off as the program began, was fast for the feature and Quiz Show was clocked in 0:52 2/5 only three fifths of a second over the track record for 4½ furlongs established by Saggy.

Quiz Show was making the third start of his career having won a maiden event here April 28 when he defeated, among others, Arthur Weiger's Long Gone, winner of today's second race. The powerful 2-year-old, who made a dull debut in Florida last winter, was the seventh winner of the meeting saddled by Trainer J. H. Pierce.

Gigolo's Defeat Surprising

The defeat of Gigolo came as a surprise to his followers. The Eight Thirty colt was second to E. K. Bryson's fleet Make Swing at Hialeah and then came here to lead all the way in a maiden event, following with a similar performance over allowance company.

There was no question about Quiz Show's superiority over the opposition gathered for him today. Gigolo, ridden by Jockey Jimmy Lynch, stepped to the front at the break but Quiz Show was running right along with him.

At the far turn, Gigolo came over toward the inside rail and Gilbert was forced to stand up in the saddle. He eased the colt back and then came to the outside.

Lynch went to work in earnest on Gigolo in the early stretch but it was apparent at the time that Quiz Show was going to be the winner. Gilbert used a strong hand ride, plus intermittent whipping, and the Apache colt came on to win going away.

Becraft Hurls Six-Hitter, GW Whips Hoyas, 7 to 4

4-Run Rally In 2d Wins For Colonials

Lanky Bones Becraft pitched his first complete game of the year, a six-hitter, to give George Washington University a 7-4 victory over Georgetown yesterday at Griffith Stadium.

Bones got a big assist from First Baseman Don Druckenmiller, who poled a bases-loaded triple to deep left-center in the second inning to cap a four-run Colonial rally.

Fair Trade Bill Will Do Good, Klein Asserts

His fair trade bill now before Congress will be "good for the industry and eventually good for the people," Representative Arthur Klein (D., N. Y.) told the Washington Retail Liquor Dealers Association last night.

Klein and Representative George P. Miller (D., Calif.) addressed a meeting at the Hamilton Hotel on effects of pending legislation on the liquor industry.

His bill to allow bars to remain open two hours later on Saturday nights was proposed to combat the "unfair" competition of after-hours clubs which provide no revenue to the District, Klein said.

Reiterating his opposition to a sales tax, he declared the Federal Government should pay at least the 18 million dollars tax valuation of its real estate holdings toward District upkeep and that all residents should pay income taxes. If this were done, there would be no need for a sales tax, he said.

The liquor industry is going through a period of growth and evolution which was cut off by prohibition, Miller said.

People as a whole haven't learned the lessons of prohibition, he declared. "Taxing the industry for all it will bear will only drive it underground," he warned.

Ice Blamed for Crash Killing 11 Yale Students

NYHT News Service

Wing ice and frost were blamed yesterday by the Civil Aeronautics Board for the crash of a charter service Douglas DC-3 last January 2 at Seattle in which 11 Yale students and 3 crew members were killed.

The board's report exonerated the airport control tower operator who cleared the flight for take-off and placed full responsibility on the pilot.

Battle Tells School Plan to Fairfax Group

John S. Battle, Democratic candidate for Governor of Virginia, last night restated to a Fairfax County audience his proposal for making available 74 million dollars to localities for school construction in the next year.

Saying that the recommendations which he made public three weeks ago had been "twisted," Battle explained again how, as Governor, he would ask the General Assembly to help the localities solve the problem of classroom shortages:

(1) The 30 million dollars in the teachers' retirement fund could be loaned to the counties. This, said Battle, would not be a "raid" on the fund. "It is merely a transfer of the place this money is to be invested."

(2) The sinking fund contains 12 million dollars above legal requirements which could also be loaned to localities.

(3) Repayments to the State Literary Fund will make two million dollars available for loans by July 1, 1950.

(4) By July 1, 1950, the State will have 30 million dollars surplus from unanticipated tax receipts. Battle proposed this be given the localities in outright grants that need not be repaid.

Battle, a State Senator from Charlottesville, told his audience at Fairfax Courthouse that 42 million dollars of the funds he would lend was available when the General Assembly last met in the winter of 1948.

"There was no cry then," he said, "from the localities for additional money for loans to the localities for school purposes. Our present school construction emergency was not known at that time, at least was not anticipated to reach the point where it is today."

The other 32 million dollars he referred to will not be received until March 1 or July 1 next year, he said.

"There is no great mystery about the plan I have to recommend to the General Assembly," he said. "I would also have you remember that under no other plan yet made public could any money be made available for school construction until 1951."

Bald Head's Gleam Saves Owner's Life

Phoenix, Ariz., May 4 (U.P.).—Frank P. Attaway, 62, Phoenix blacksmith, thanked the gleam of his bald head tonight for saving him from almost certain death under the wheels of a speeding passenger train.

Attaway, en route to Portland, Ore., fell from the train he was riding as it passed through Avondale, Ariz. He was pulled unconscious from the path of a second train in a real life version of a Hollywood movie thriller.

She summoned a nearby police car. As police flashed the patrol car's spotlight on the figure on the tracks, they heard a train whistle.

The train was already in sight as the officers vaulted over two barbed wire fences and raced towards the tracks. They scrambled up the nine-foot roadbed and grabbed Attaway by his clothing.

The "train looked as if it were already on top of us," the officers said later.

200 Protest Rent Raises

The resolution charged the proposed rent increases were sanctioned in violation of the Housing and Rent Act of 1949, in that the Office of the Housing Expediter approved the PHA rental scale without first giving tenants a hearing.

Because the new rentals were not announced until April 14 they would be affected by the 1949 law which went into effect April 1, a spokesman said.

The resolution also charged the PHA failed to submit records proving hardship or increased operating costs as required by the new act in rent adjustment cases, and that the Housing Expediter failed to require PHA to certify that it is maintaining services provided for in the rental contracts.

The rentals proposed by PHA would provide increases averaging 15 per cent, and would amount to as much as $15 more a month in some cases, it was said.

$9,388,686 Low Bid for Court Building

Charles H. Tompkins Co., 907 16th st. nw., submitted the lowest of five bids for constructing the Federal Court BuHding, the Public Buildings Administration announced yesterday.

Tompkins asked $9,388,686 to build the seven-story structure of Indiana limestone and granite. George Hyman Construction Co. was next low with $9,400,000.

Public Buildings Commissioner W. E. Reynolds said he will award the contract in about 10 days, after a routine investigation of the authenticity of the bids.

Other bidders and the figures quoted are McCloskey Homes, Inc., Philadelphia, $9,644,000; John McShain, Inc., Philadelphia, and George A. Fuller Co., Washington, $9,961,000.

Low bids for installation of escalators and elevators were: Haughton Elevator Co., 2117 K st. nw., $429,000 for elevators, and Otis Elevator Co., 810 18th st. nw., $48,902 for escalators.

The new courthouse will be erected at Constitution ave., John Marshall pl., 3d and C sts. nw., now used as a parking lot.

Jess Larson Confirmed As Head of FWA

The Senate confirmed yesterday President Truman's appointment of Jess Larson to be Federal Works Administrator.

Larson succeeds Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, who has been named by Mr. Truman to head the maritime commission. Larson now is War Assets Administrator.

The nomination of Admiral Paul L. Mather to succeed Larson was held over at the request of Senator Hill (D., Ala.), who was acting as majority leader. Hill said he personally favored confirmation.

Larson, an Oklahoman, was confirmed by unanimous voice vote.

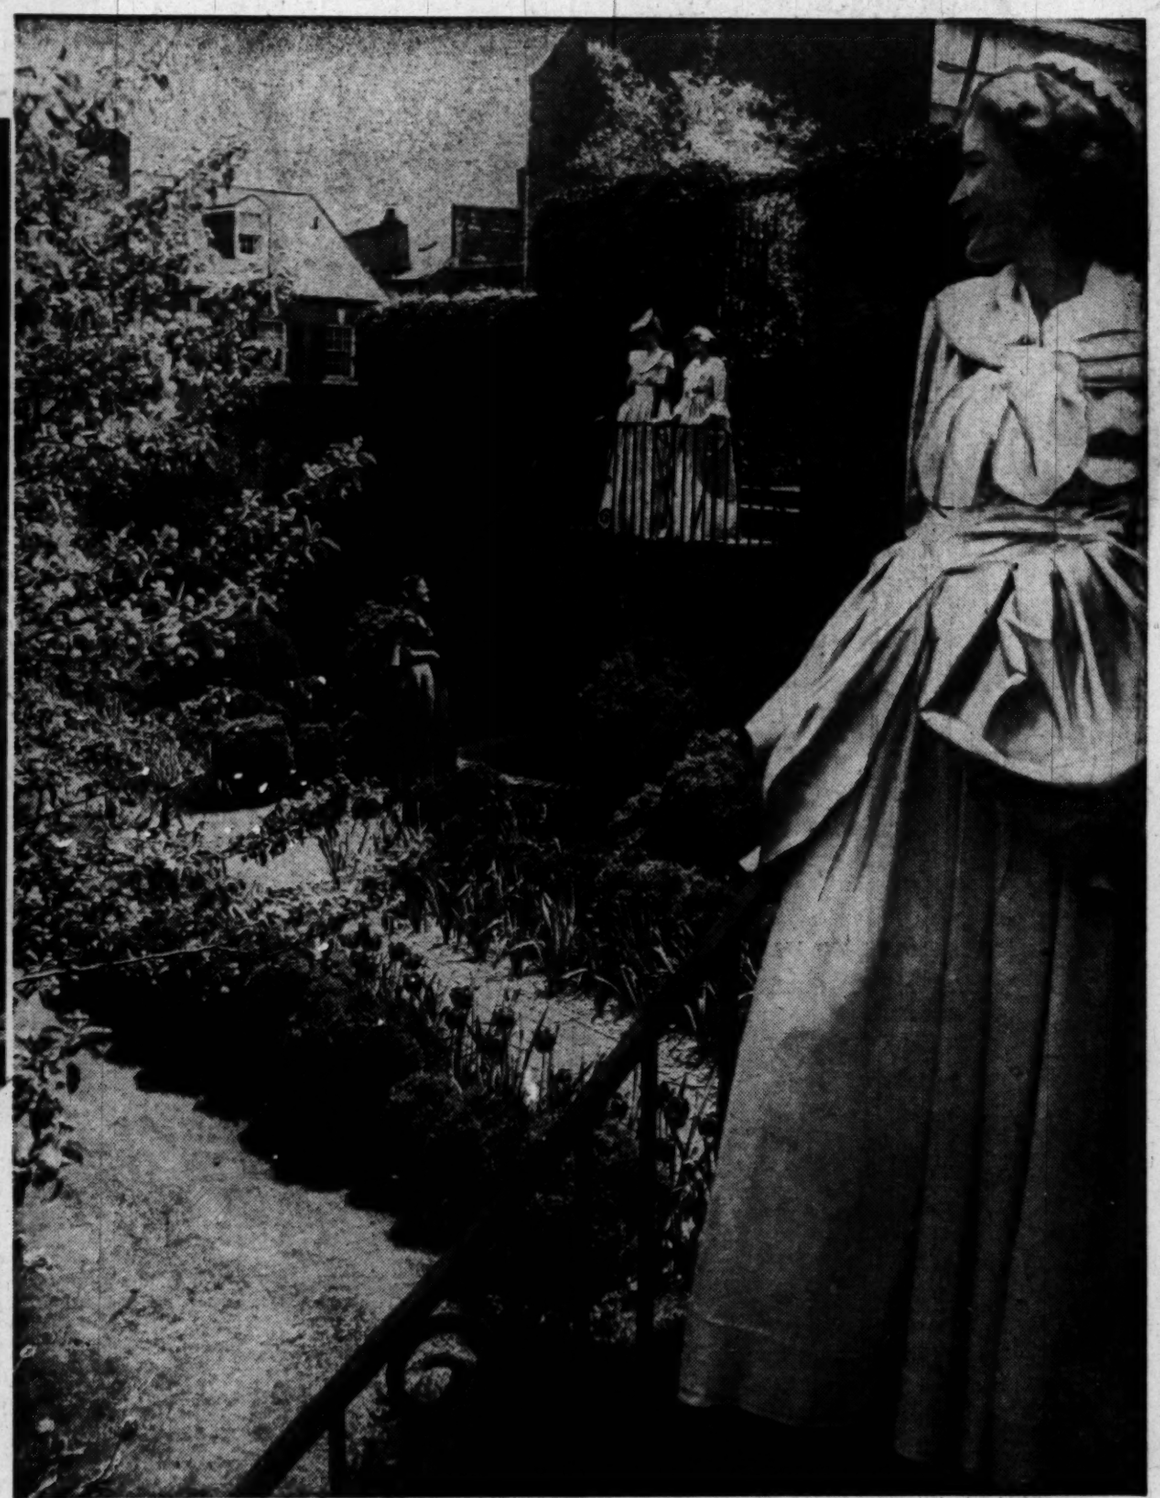
WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, MAY 5, 1949

Alexandria to Show Its Historic Homes

A FAVORITE portrait dominates the wall of Mr. and Mrs. Thurman Arnold's drawing room at Summerhill, their home in Alexandria, which will be shown on the Alexandria tour. The painting is of their daughter-in-law, Mrs. George L. Arnold, the former Miss Ellen Pearson. In Colonial costume is Mrs. Benjamin E. McElherney. The tour will be held from 11 a. m. to 6 p. m. on Saturday and from 2 until 6 p. m. on Sunday



IN the walled garden of Col. and Mrs. Charles Beatty Moore's house, known as the William Fairfax House, in Alexandria, are posed Mrs. Edward Shackelford (foreground) and on the lower level of the three-level garden, Mrs. Robert V. Duncan. Looking down on the scene from the tiny balcony are Miss Kitty Reese and Mrs. John Norton. The Moore home will be one of the Historic Houses shown on the Alexandria tour Saturday and Sunday.

Antiques, Silver Heirlooms to Be Exhibited

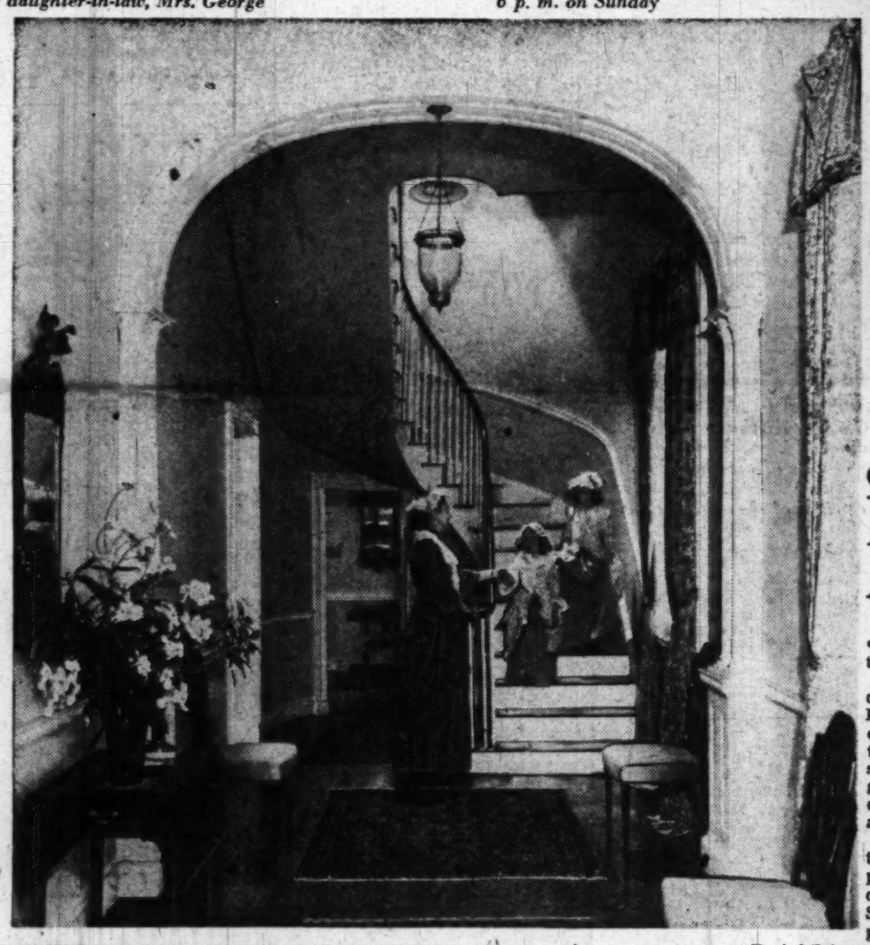
ONE of the most interesting features of the tour of Alexandria's Historic Houses on Saturday and Sunday will be the loan exhibition of Alexandria antiques and heirlooms to be on view at Chequire House, 202 King st.

Mrs. Smith Mayo is chairman of the exhibition, assisted by Mrs. Robert M. Reese, Miss Nancy Tackett, Miss Esther Green, Meredith Johnson and Worth Bailey.

One of the articles, "Jefferson's dumb waiter," is a four-tiered table on casters, now owned by a descendant of Thomas Jefferson, Miss Ellen Coolidge Burke. This early version of the tea cart was one of a pair used by Mr. Jefferson in the White House dining room when he wished to dispense with the services of servants.

A priceless collection of silver made by an early Alexandria silversmith will be shown, as well as old china, portraits and other heirlooms, loaned by descendants of Lord Fairfax, John Alexander, William Ramsey and other prominent families identified with the early history of Alexandria.

For those not wishing to make the entire tour this exhibition may be seen by paying a fee of 50 cents. Tickets for the tour are obtainable at the AAA, in Washington, and on the days of the tour at the George Mason Hotel or at the first house visited. All proceeds will go to the restoration of Ramsey House, home of Alexandria's first Lord Mayor.



Harris & Ewing

LAFAYETTE HOUSE, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Wallack's house in Alexandria, will be shown for the first time on the tour of Alexandria's Historic Homes on Saturday and Sunday. Bringing back colonial days are Mrs. Henry Fowler and winsome Jill Margolies and Suzan Fowler, all in costumes of the times

Fashions to Feature Belle Haven Tea

"Round-the-Clock" fashions will be a feature of a tea at 3 p. m. today at the Belle Haven Country Club in Alexandria. The fashion show, presented by Woodward & Lothrop, will be under the direction of Mrs. Marion Tolson, regional director of the Washington fashion group. Mrs. Dorothy Dever is chairman of the tea, assisted by Mrs. Jack Howard and Mrs. Eugene Olmi.

Burtons Fete Farringtons At Congressional Club Tea

JUSTICE and Mrs. Harold Burton were hosts, and Hawaii's Delegate, Joseph Farrington, and Mrs. Farrington, honor guests at the large tea yesterday at the Congressional Club.

Diplomats, lawmakers, law protectors, and a wide circle of non-official friends of both hosts and guests of honor were there. Mrs. Burton, in a charming ankle-length frock of mauve Chantilly lace over orchid taffeta, accented her costume with deep violet gloves and shoes to match. Mrs. Farrington's gown was a black silk jacket dress dotted in red and her black hat had a red trim.

Looking to a warm afternoon, the hostess had provided a cool punch, bowls of ice cream and hot coffee for those who preferred it. She had asked Mrs. Homer Ferguson to be in charge of the coffee pourers, who included Mrs. Hugo Black, Mrs. Wiley Rutledge, Mrs. William O. Douglas, Mrs. Robert Jackson.

Mrs. John J. Williams kept the ice cream table well manned and serving at this station were Mrs. William Knowland, Mrs. Eugene Millikin, Mrs. Alexander Smith,

Girl of Fine Religious Family, With No Blot On Their Escutcheon, Is Told by Fiance That His Parents Weren't Married; She's Unnerved

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am of a family with a very religious background as well as community-wide popularity. There has never been a divorce or even a good spat in the whole family.

All my life I have been prompted to be the best in school, the best in church, the best in sports; in short, I had to be tops and only the best was expected of me.

Recently I became engaged to Bob, who has been so thoughtful and good, and who seemed so genuinely fine, sincere and clean that I have marvelled at his wonderful character. He has a lesser education and a lower salary than mine; but he is going to school and this can be corrected.

What Would Her Family Think?

BOB has many friends, all of whom speak only praise of him; and naturally I felt supremely happy to have met and been loved by such a person. But a week after we became engaged, Bob told me that he was born out of wedlock and that his mother didn't marry until some years after.

If you could have seen his face when he told me! It was like a little boy clutching his dead puppy and begging me to say it wasn't dead. My very soul winced as his words fell on my disbelieving ears. When finally I collected myself, I felt that I would marry him, no matter what.

That was several months ago and neither of us has mentioned it since; but when we are out with friends I find myself wondering what they would do or say if they knew. Would they leave us out of things? What would my parents say? Is it fair to give my children such a father? Is it right to marry Bob for the fine person he is; or am I inviting mental and social disaster if we wed? I shall be grateful for your honest opinion. A. V.

Both Are Trying to Smother Fear

DEAR A. V.: This much is plain: Bob is profoundly anxious about his natal history, at least as concerns your reaction to it; and you are just as troubled by vague misgivings. But by tacit consent, both of you are trying to smother the fears that cloud your respective feelings; and thus in effect you are in flight from the issue, instead of facing it and searching for a true understanding of what it means to each of you.

In broaching the matter like a terrified child, Bob signified that he feared the worst, namely, rejection by you, if and when you heard the story. And the haste with which you pushed the admission back underground, so that it has never been mentioned since, shows his fears had something to feed on.

You were in love with Bob on an illusory basis, with the man you "thought" he was; and when he disclosed certain facts that presented him in a different light—from your viewpoint—you were stunned by the challenge to accept or reject the reality. Your emotions cried out, "I must have Bob, no matter what—," meaning the Bob your fancy had painted—and on that note the subject was tabled.

Wise to Review Case With Pastor

BUT THAT'S no settlement, as your mounting dismay has proved. The whole picture—as to past and future—still must be examined with calm candid thoroughness, in order to reach a working agreement concerning what seems best to do.

In fairness to Bob and yourself, you cannot make somebody else responsible for deciding whether you ought to marry him. You must find the answer to that yourself; but you should have prudent firsthand help, from a kindly objective source, in exploring the question. And your pastor is a logical person to consult.

It is my impression that you are living and working in a different city from your home town, and that you haven't known Bob very long; thus responsible personal guidance seems vitally important, to bring reason to bear on the situation. M. H.

Earliest Planning Promotes Wholesome Sex Attitude

(Fifth of a series based on the Children's Bureau new booklet, "Your Child From 6 to 12.")

By David Taylor Marke

Parents have an obligation to make sex behavior, feelings and understanding part of their earliest planned guidance for children. Failure here may weaken the whole fabric of their child's future. By school age, a child's curiosity about his body and where babies come from is answered satisfactorily for the moment or it is crammed into the realm of tabooed subjects.

The first is better, but either way, widening interests at school give a chance for a quiet, natural job of satisfying present needs and preparing for teen-age changes.

Good relations between parents—sexual and otherwise—is a great unconscious influence on the child's adjustment. Frankness, naturalness, love are soil for attitudes.

He needs to know his body—muscles, lungs, heart, food—and names of parts, their purpose and performance. He needs to know of glands that open inside him, not outside like tear ducts, and that these will change his appearance and feelings.

He needs to know reasons for rules of sex behavior—why marriage and family life is necessary; and why, in our society, mating comes long after sex maturity. He should learn parents must first be established so they can care for children. He should know that strong teen-age sex drives are neither good nor bad, but necessary for continuance of the race.

Nearing puberty, he should know how he will change physically and emotionally. Girls should know earlier. They mature earlier. They often feel out of step because they seem older than boys their age. And both girls and boys need to know about changes in the other sex.

Father, rather than mother, may be more suitable to help a school-age boy. Fathers should be on such friendly terms with sons as to make reserve or embarrassment unnecessary.

Oriental Dress for Tea

Mrs. Clare Chennault Is Decorative Figure In Taffeta and Gold

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

MRS. CLARE CHENNAULT is just about the most decorative object to grace a Washington garden in many a moon. The youthful Chinese wife of the "Flying Tiger" wears Western dress mornings, but afternoons blossoms into Oriental finery. The other afternoon her marvelously slim Chinese figure was molded in a sheath of black taffeta brocaded with gold thread butterflies. She wore jade earrings and a tiny column of flawless jewel jade hung from a gold chain around her throat. Mrs. Chennault, a former journalist, has abandoned her profession temporarily "to work for my husband." The Chennault's baby daughter is doing fine. "Of course she's not like other babies," grinned the general, his weather-worn face crackling with pleasure. "We think there's something very special about her." Those who served in China with General Chennault will be interested to know that the baby hasn't completely displaced "Joe." Joe's the general's dachshund who accompanied him as faithfully as Falla did President Roosevelt. Joe's fine, too.

THOUGH "things" are hot in China, the myriad friends of our intrepid Consul General John Moors Cabot will be pleased to know that (so far) he's sitting out the battle in an apartment atop a Shanghai skyscraper. And, though armies are fighting in too close vicinity, the telephone is still working Washingtonwards. Only Monday night the Consul General actually talked with Mrs. Cabot from Shanghai. For one reared in a conventional Back Bay atmosphere, John Cabot developed a most unusual habit, picking trouble spots. He's been whisked to do emergency jobs in Jugoslavia, Guatemala, Argentina within the past few years and has managed to emerge not only with credit but comparatively unnicked by bullets, bombs or knives. Only once did Cabot fall by the wayside; both he and Mrs. Cabot were arrested for snapping pictures in Pec, Jugoslavia.

THOSE who admired The Washington's Post's front-page photograph of Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg in his new blue uniform can only dimly imagine, without laying eyes on it, the dazzling effect of that bright, bright blue. Nor can they imagine how much time it takes to get the decorations properly adjusted. Mrs. Vandenberg sews them on herself and it's quite a job, as they have to be in correct order and correctly-spaced.

Remember the hormone spray used on the Oriental cherry trees to keep the petals of the blossoms intact for the Cherry Blossom carnival? Well, the Department of Agriculture has just announced a few further facts about this fascinating idea. Hormones, it seems, doubled the usual bloom period of seven days. Now it's being used to make holly berries "stick tight," to keep apples from dropping too soon. This department feels the spray has all sorts of unexplored possibilites—why not use it on men's heads, how about teeth, could it be used to prevent nails from breaking or, in a pinch, to keep stockings up?

THERE'S a British colonel in town, R. P. de Winton, to be specific who has a job on the Staff Duties, Weapons and Training (or "The SDWT," Old Boy, as the British say informally). Colonel de Winton, at a recent auction has purchased the most provocative-sounding property we've heard of. It's called "The Falls o Feugh" (pronounced Falls o Fuff!) The falls are part of th Water of Feugh, which eventuall runs into the Dee River i Scotland. The colonel purchase riverside land to obtain salmon an trout fishing rights. The falls however, are quite a tourist attraction, amateur ichyologists and others coming from far and presumably wide to see the fish leap upriver. We're not crazed for fish, but would travel any reasonable distance just to be able to say we'd seen a natural phenomenon named Falls of Fuff!

Along Embassy Row

A NEW Assistant Agricultural Attache at the British Embassy, M. W. Taylor, will arrive in Washington on May 8, succeeding P. J. MacFarlan who is returning to the United Kingdom on the completion of his three years- appointment.

Mr. Taylor is a poultry expert. He took both B.A. and M.A. degrees from Emmanuel College, Cambridge, England, and from 1933 to 1941 he was engaged in poultry farming on his own account: He was appointed to the staff of the Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries in 1946 as Poultry Adviser in the National Agricultural Advisory Service.

Accompanying Mr. Taylor to Washington are his wife and 15-year-old daughter.

Urges GOP Change Name for Success

Dr. Suzanne Silvercruys, internationally known sculptor and author, declared last night that if the Republican Party ever expected to win a national election it should change its name. She made her suggestion in an address last night at the annual meeting of the Lehigh County Pennsylvania Republican Women's Council.

The speaker is the sister of the Belgian Ambassador to the United States and the wife of Col. Edward Ford Stevenson, USAR.

Dr. Silvercruys, as she is known professionally, advocated that the Republican Party change its name to "The Party of the Constitution." "We can keep the GOP," she explained, "but let it stand for Greater Opportunities for the People—not for the Grand Old Party."

A number of prominent Washington women are working in the United Negro College Fund's sixth annual Washington appeal, now unnow under way.

Mrs. Francis Biddle, Mrs. John McCloy, Mrs. Marshall Hornblower, Mrs. Thomas E. Harris, Mrs. Ernest K. Lindley and Mrs. Leon Henderson are among the women aiding the $38,000 local drive.

Mrs. John H. Ferguson is in charge of special gifts for the fund, which is used to bridge the gap between the money raised by tuition fees, endowments and grants, and the minimum operating costs which are estimated to run 10 per cent higher.

Among the 31 colleges participating in the fund are Hampton Institute, Fisk, Tuskegee and Virginia Union.

In charge of general solicitation in the Washington area is Mrs. Gerhard van Arkel who is assisted by a group including Mrs. Phillip Watts, Mrs. John Onley, Mrs. Edwin McElwaine and Mrs. Robert Eichholz.

Mrs. Chauncey Waddell, daughter of the late Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, is associate chairman of the National Council, in charge of women's activities.

Ask Anne
About Stains On Cabinet

We bought an under-sink metal cabinet. In shipping it, they taped the doors closed with a heavy gray paper tape. When removed it left a yellow stain, which is getting darker each day. Have tried soap, and kitchen cleanser to remove it. Do you have any suggestion?

V. G.

The only suggestion I would have to offer from the information provided would be to wipe the stained area with a cloth moistened with carbon tetrachloride and then wash with mild soap suds. This should remove any remaining adhesive and stop the action which is making the surface darker. If the cabinet is painted white you may be able to remove the discoloration of household bleach and water. Pat this paste onto the stain and let stand until dry. If this lightens the stain, but doesn't completely remove it, repeat.

Could you tell me what to put in some home-made soap to make it smell sweet? Also, where I can buy it?

R. H. G.

Any perfume in the fragrance you prefer can be used to give a pleasant odor to soap. The reason that directions for making home-made soap do not include directions for perfuming it, is because home made soaps are not usually highly enough refined for use as toilet soap.

Can you tell me the method to use to dull shiny brass hardware? I have in mind "H" hinges and prefer a dull finish to the shiny finish I find on ones available. I believe some sort of acid is used. N. W. B.

The only safe way to remove the shine of the brass would be to rub it with a fine abrasive such as pumice and oil. Extreme care must be used in using harsh abrasives or acid on brass. If the brass is not solid, abrasives might remove the finish, leaving the foundation metal exposed so that it will easily rust and corrode. Acids would eat into the surface, leaving it pitted and unsightly.

Inquiries and contributions to the "Ask Anne" column must be in written form. We regret that time does not permit handling them by telephone. Address letters or cards to Anne, Room 403, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C.

Fashion Party Delights 100

Nearly 100 guests were invited by the hostess to view a new collection of summer fashions which she has just brought down from New York for her shop, "Lelia, Jr."

The party was given at the home of Miss Dickey's mother, Mrs. Newbold Noyes, at 1715 N st. Everything from bathing suits to evening dresses were modeled, while Miss Anne Heard and Miss Delight Wood did the commentating.

After the show, cocktails were served, and the inimitable Bella Hagner did a skit imitating celebrities.

The lovely mannequins were Miss Joan Exnicios, Mrs. Spencer Davis, Mrs. Wilkins Cooley, Miss Margaret Thors, Mrs. Nathaniel Luttrell, Mrs. Patricia Owens, Miss Bonny Barker and Miss Ann Heard.

In the audience were Mr. and Mrs. James Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Beauregard, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Dickey, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Boorman, Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, Barry Woods, Harry Hoskinson, Castello Branco, William Zimmerman and many others.

THESE curtains, which can be washed, rehung, and dried in 7 minutes are subject of a special demonstration in Washington this week. They're made of glass fibers in a sheer marquisette weave. After laundering, they air-dry without a wrinkle in a few minutes time, as is proven in the Hecht Co. showing here. Besides being fireproof, the curtains won't mildew, rot, or become a moth cafeteria. Made in white or eggshell, they soil more slowly than ordinary curtains. They come in tailored and ruffled styles.

Soroptomist Club Honors New Members

Seven new members, given certificates and corsages and introduced by verse, were inducted into the Soroptimist Club of Washington yesterday at a luncheon meeting at the Willard Hotel.

The new members are Mrs. Elsie V. Burns, Miss Lillian Cramer, Miss Isobel Douglas, Mrs. Elizabeth Geib, Mrs. Eugenia Hatcher, Miss Shirley Thrush and Mrs. Thalia Woods.

The new members were introduced by Miss Helen Barhardt and the president, Mrs. Edith Claude Jarvis, presided at the meeting.

Eightieth Club to Hold Luncheon Friday

The monthly meeting of the Eightieth Club will be held Friday at the Shoreham Hotel.

Mrs. Ken Regan and Mrs. Clark Thompson of Texas have charge of the program and have arranged for a fashion show to be presented following the business meeting.

Shop the Herb Booth Friday To Make Eating an Adventure

ROSEMARY may be for remembrance and catnip for cats, but there are dozens of herbs that seem to have been created expressly to make your food taste better.

A fine opportunity for culinary adventuring with these will be offered Friday, when a special herb booth will be set up in connection with the flower mart on the Pilgrim Steps of the Washington Cathedral.

On sale will be dried herbs of all kinds from the cottage herb garden in the Cathedral grounds, pots of herb plants if you want to take them home and grow your own, and books and pamphlets on herbs, their culture, and use. Cochairmen for the booth are Mrs. Andrew S. Keck, Mrs. George Taylor and Mrs. James Patterson.

Savory-Summer (annual). Slender, soft leaves; pale, pinkish-lavender flowers. Leaves used in flavoring soups, salads, meats and vegetables or as a garnish.

To Women
WHO'D LIKE TO KNOW MORE ABOUT INVESTMENTS
Without cost to you, beginning May 16, we are giving a 4 weeks' course on the handling of money and how to invest it.
The classes are one hour long . . . will be held once a week at Clendenen Hall, American University, at 8:00 in the evening. Final class at our office, 815 Fifteenth Street, on date to be announced later.
From the course you should get a clear understanding of:
1. What an investment is.
2. How invested money helps make America secure.
3. The relationship between intelligent investing and your standard of living.
4. How invested money works to earn interest and dividends for you.
5. The different kinds of investments.
6. How to evaluate an investment.
7. The functions of a Stock Exchange and a brokerage firm..
Experts in the fields of investment and money habits will instruct and answer questions on these and allied subjects.
There is no charge for the course. But to enable us to provide ample facilities it will be necessary for those planning to attend to write or call for registration cards. Such cards may be obtained from our office.

Something every Mother should know about County Fair Bread!

When youngsters get lots of exercise and eat lots of good food like famous COUNTY FAIR BREAD, they can gain real "muscle weight." Yes, real "muscle weight"—not just fat.

"Muscle weight," developed in this way, goes with strength, sturdiness and stamina to play better, work better—and general ability to resist illness.

Remember, too—you'll find every kind of satisfaction in this fine bread: Taste satisfaction, because COUNTY FAIR BREAD is always rich, delicious. Freshness satisfaction, because of a fast-delivery service. Nutrition satisfaction, because COUNTY FAIR BREAD contains elements children need every day.

5-Digit 'Numbers Game' Whets Taylor's Curiosity

WTOP's Glen Taylor is a curious soul.

INCIDENTAL INTELLIGENCE

The current edition of the Yellow Cab Company's "Yellogram" contains some information which should be of interest to hackers and their patrons alike.

It reminds us of the PUC regulation that when a cab driver is off duty and using the cab for his own purposes, he may display an "Off Duty" sign.

However, he is NOT permitted to display such an "Off Duty" sign in a moving taxicab between 7 and 9 a. m., and between 4 and 7 p. m.

In other words, pleasure driving is forbidden to hackers during the rush hours.

"On Call" signs are permissible during the rush hours—but the driver must be able to prove that he is actually on his way to answer a call.

Just the other day a precinct police captain nailed a hacker who was trying to "pick" his fares by using a phony "On Call" sign. Result: The driver may lose his license.

GAO BLUES

Theodore Bullockus of 6323 Luzon ave. nw. is trying to find out whether any local forwarding company will pick up a 60-pound foot locker at the freight office and deliver it to his home for 40 cents.

Tad doesn't want the job done; he just wants to know whether anybody is willing to do it that cheap.

There's a story behind his curiosity. He returned from an overseas Army civilian job recently, and submitted a voucher for expenses incurred in the move. The Army sent the voucher to the General Accounting Office, which okayed everything except one item—$1.18 for delivery of the foot locker from the railroad freight yard to the Bullockus apartment.

In spite of the attached receipt, GAO ruled that 40 cents is plenty for such a haul. So 40 cents is all that was paid.

APOSTROPHE S, DAVE

Twelve-year-old David Berkenbilt of 32 Tuckerman st. nw. reports that a certain radio announcer sometimes seems to be saying: " . . . direct from the star snooze room."

BLOODTHIRSTY BARD

This newspaper's account of a recent murder described it as being "as deeply mysterious and involved as any play ever written by Shakespeare."

George O. L. Holmes of 3002 Franklin st. ne. objects, and asks: "When did Shakespeare start writing whodunits? Name some."

Methinks the gentleman is right. "Involved" some of those plots certainly are. But "mysterious"? Hardly.

W. Shakespeare killed his characters with a reckless abandon. But as far as I can recall, the audience always knew whodunit—and very often the foul deeds were perpetrated in full view of the patrons.

Does anybody rise to challenge these remarks; or will my high school English teacher be proud of me?

OVERHEARD

(As salesman drops customer's change while counting it over to him): "Ooops! I'm not myself today. Ordinarily I don't let go of a quarter that easily."

TAKE A CHANCE AND LISTEN TO BILL

My radio guest today (WTOP, 10 a. m.) will be Dr. Ernest E. Blanche, who has just written a book titled "You Can't Win." It's dedicated to those who like to gamble.

If you're one of those who likes to "take a chance" on occasion, tune in. What can you lose? Godfrey comes on at 10:30.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Fair Deal Bogs Down in Hospitals

By Drew Pearson

The Truman program continues to be slowed down in the Senate. This is partly because the President's key leaders have been torn apart by personal feuds or mowed down by sickness and exhaustion.

Scott W. Lucas

Majority Leader Scott Lucas of Illinois has been in the hospital, worn out by the grueling grind of trying to keep Democratic forces together. Before going to the hospital he had wrangled with Senator Howard McGrath, chairman of the Democratic National Committee. McGrath, according to a complaint Senator Lucas made to the White House, was trying to steal the spotlight as Senate spokesman. And this in turn brought some sour private comments from McGrath about Lucas.

Meanwhile, two other Senate figures have been in the hospital—Senate Secretary Biffle and Majority Secretary "Skeeter" Johnson. The Democrats have leaned heavily upon Biffle to keep peace between the Senate and the White House.

Before going to the hospital, Biffle himself clashed with the Senate's President Pro Tem, Senator McKellar of Tennessee.

On the more optimistic side, however, many Democratic committee chairmen have plugged ahead with legislation, and several key bills are set for debate.

"British Dominion?"

British Foreign Minister Ernie Bevin is a lot more pleased than Trygve "Trigger" Lie over the inclusion of Norway in the Atlantic Pact—and Lie told him so when Bevin was in this country.

Bevin was jubilant over what he called the "brave stand" taken by Norway in joining the pact despite the persistent neutrality of Sweden. Meeting Lie, who is now Secretary General of the United Nations, Bevin said:

"By this act you have moved closer to us. We feel toward you as we would toward one of our own dominions."

To which Trygve Lie, with heavy sarcasm, replied, "Thank you!"

Note—Lie says privately he would not have come running to Washington, if he had been Norwegian Foreign Minister—as he was once. He would have waited for the possible common action of all three Scandinavian countries.

Champions Negro

President Truman heard some straight-from-the-shoulder advice on the question of Negro education the other day from a Southern Congressman who gets around in a wheelchair. The White House visitor was 38-year-old Congressman Charles Bennett of Florida.

"The Federal Government can't be proud of the way it has failed to deal with illiteracy among the Negroes," the young Floridian told Truman. "What many people forget is that the Government countenanced slavery before the Civil War. In fact, a lot of the slave trade was carried on by Northerners.

"Then, when slavery was abolished by fire and sword—"

"Well, I don't mean to be waving the Confederate flag," explained Bennett, "but it's nonetheless a fact that the Government left Negro former slaves and their families to shift for themselves after the Civil War was over. The very least we can do now is to provide better and more schools to counteract the illiteracy that has resulted from that situation."

Truman promised to consider legislation Bennett has introduced to provide additional school facilities for Negro students—if Congress doesn't meet the need in the Federal-aid-to-education program.

Troops in Germany

One of the toughest problems Russia is likely to raise at the Foreign Ministers' Conference is a proposal to withdraw all troops from Germany—both Russian and French - British - American. This would leave a German Communist army, trained by the Russians, in control of eastern Germany and it wouldn't take long for this army to take over western Germany.

Secretary of State Acheson has been doing some quiet conferring with the British as to how to meet this problem, and they have now decided that the Western Allies will counter Russia's proposal with one of their own. They will demand that eastern Germany be merged with the free western zones into a new German state.

The western zones, they believe, are now sufficiently strong to dominate eastern Germany, once the Red army evacuates. But in any case they believe their proposal would never be accepted by the Russians and hence the troops of neither side would be withdrawn.

Home Boy Makes Good

About the first man Jess Larson met after he was appointed Federal Works Administrator was Dave Vandivier, publisher of the Chickasha (Okla.) Express. Meeting Larson by accident, Vandiver said:

"One of the first projects we're going to put up to you is the new water works for your home town."

"I guess that's the water works I started when I was mayor," recalled new Federal Works Administrator Larson. The water works he provided for the city at that time has now been outmoded by the city's growth.

HAIR THINNING HERE POINTS TO BALDNESS
DANDRUFF SCALES SHOULD BE PROMPTLY REMOVED

THE three danger zones where baldness usually attempts to invade your scalp are: the temples, frontal point, and crown. At the first sign of thinning hair at any of these three points, you should adopt a sound, safe hair-defense program. Proper treatment and care should help you to keep your hair in a well-groomed, healthy appearing condition for a long time.

Your battle against baldness will be most effective if it is directed by an experienced, competent hair expert. During the past 25 years The Thomas' have helped more than a quarter-million other men in their fight for hair health. These years of extensive experience endow Thomas experts with the kind of skill and ability which you, too, need. Undoubtedly The Thomas' have treated many cases similar to yours.

It will cost you nothing to find out exactly what Thomas treatment can do for you. Come in for free consultation and advice (in private). See for yourself how Thomas removes dandruff scales and relieves the itch which they may be causing. You'll readily understand after a visit to a Thomas office why The Thomas' are recognized as the "World's Leading Hair and Scalp Specialists." Come in today for free scalp examination and advice—in private.
